B.C. May Ban Drink, Smoke Advertising

By PETER McNELLY

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark warned Friday the provincial government is studying in "deadly earnest" the question of eliminating alcohol and tobacco advertising.

"If you spend money on rehabilitation . . . it doesn't make sense to subsidize death through income tax deductions," Loffmark said, describing advertising of liquor and cigarettes as a form of "pushing" which should be condemned.

Loffmark was speaking during debate on a bill to establish a $25 million drug, alcohol and cigarette education and rehabilitation fund. The bill also provides $20 million for the home acquisition fund and $5 million for crop insurance.

Members from both the New Democratic Party and the government side indicated much of the annual interest from the $25 million fund should be used to stress education against drug, alcohol and cigarette abuse.

The minister said the pushing of heroin and other dangerous drugs has been deservedly condemned, but added that cigarette and alcohol pushing must be condemned on the same principle.

"The time has come for the governments to examine very closely the laws relating to advertising of alcohol and tobacco," said Loffmark.

Bob Strachan (NDP—Cowichan Malahat) called for a ban on such advertising and warned the MLAs that young people using drugs find it hard to take warnings from adults too seriously because of "addiction to cigarettes, alcohol, tranquilizers and pep-pills" by adults.

He urged Premier Bennett to seek a total ban on tobacco and alcohol advertising at the next federal-provincial conference.

The B.C. Narcotics Addiction Foundation came in for some criticism, particularly from Dr. Scott Wallace (SC—Oak Bay) who said it is "stupid to pour extra money into the foundation's work which has failed to produce satisfactory results."

The drug rehabilitation project of Mrs. Olivia Batley of North Vancouver was praised by Sobreds, including Loffmark, and by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett. Mrs. Batley uses the "Pavlovian" method rather than traditional Freudian psychology in her method.

Loffmark said the experimental project run by the psychiatric social worker has produced 30 or 40 apparent successful rehabilitations at modest cost in contrast with the federal Matsqui institution which has been a "multi-million" waste of money.

He said the federal government last year turned down the B.C.-approved request for a grant for Mrs. Batley. This year, said Loffmark, the B.C. government has told Ottawa it will withdraw all other such approvals and give precedence to the request unless Ottawa provides money for the project.

Liberal Leader Pat McGee said his party will not support the bill.

He said there is enough in this bill — $50 million — to pay off B.C.'s hospital debt. This money, McGee said, should be given to hospitals instead of being lent back to the taxpayers at interest.

Because the money from special funds like these comes from revenue surpluses, it belongs to the taxpayers in the first place, he said.

Debate on the bill was adjourned.

HIJACK SUSPECT FIGHTS DEPORTATION EFFORTS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 19-year-old California youth won a reprieve Friday night against deportation to face air piracy charges in Seattle after a Western Airlines jet was hijacked to Canada.

Lawyer Tom Berger was granted a writ of habeas corpus by Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan in British Columbia Supreme Court which requires immigration authorities to produce Chappin Scott Peterson in court Monday to show cause why he should not be released from their custody.

Peterson, a first-year college student when he was drafted into the U.S. Army, pulled off Canada's first international hijacking Thursday night when he diverted the Boeing 737 to Vancouver from its scheduled destination in Seattle.

There were 66 other inmates on the plane. All were on their way to Fort Lewis, Wash., for six weeks of basic training.

The writ was obtained while a special immigration hearing was being held on Peterson's application for landed immigrant status.

The hearing adjourned after

IN HANDCUFFS is accused hijacker Chappin Scott Peterson.

LABOR GROUP TO PUSH FOR FULL EMPLOYMENT

OTTAWA (CP) — In its most bitter attack to date on current economic policy, the Canadian Labor Congress will urge the government to adopt a full employment budget policy to cure the national sickness of unemployment.

The proposal is contained in the CLC's annual memorandum to the cabinet to be presented Monday by Congress President Donald MacDonald and other executives of the 1.7-million-member labor body.

The 15,000-word brief blames unemployment on what it terms the government's "inflation syndrome" and tight fiscal and monetary policies.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Two consulting geologists say the potential for earthquakes makes Valdez a poor risk to be the southern terminal of the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline and recommend a route through Canada for North Slope oil.

Previous Canadian route proposals received little support during a United States interior department hearing on the pipeline, which extended into its fourth day today.

The hearing is on the department's 225-page environmental impact statement on the 800-mile pipeline from Prudhoe Bay on the Arctic coast to the warm-water port of Valdez. The route is proposed by the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.

C. I. Hawley and Gary Player, Anchorage consulting geologists, said Friday the planned oil terminal at Valdez would be in "a zone of structural weakness."

During the last 10 years the area has averaged an earthquake a year measuring at least five on the open-ended Richter scale, they said.

AVOIDS TANKERS

The two also said a Canadian route would avoid tanker shipment of the oil.

Hawley and Player said the turn easterly along the flank pipeline would go from Prudhoe Bay to Edmonton. The proposal would follow the current proposed route from Prudhoe Bay to Big Delta, turn easterly along the flank of the Yukon-Tanana upland, enter Canada at the Ladue River and cross the Yukon River to follow the Pelly River upstream.

From the Pelly headwaters, it would follow the Laird River downstream, enter the Great Plains near Fort Nelson, B.C., and then to Edmonton.

The interior department statement said a Canadian route through the Mackenzie Valley would require an additional two to four years of study.

The two geologists said their proposal has a cost and time advantage.

"It would use most of the Alyeska engineering data and preserve the investment in construction camps north of the Yukon River," Hawley said.

DELAY REDUCED

He said the delay forecast by the interior department would be reduced because of existing highway and railway access to the southern portion of the route and the present engineering studies completed north of Big Delta, Alaska.

Hawley said it also would avoid two major seismic faults crossed by the Alyeska route.

"If national security is really involved, wouldn't you rather have Alaskan oil moving through a pipeline 100 miles from the coast than in tankers, vulnerable to submarine and air attack?" Hawley asked.

Some members of the Canadian Parliament and the British Columbia legislature have recently voiced concern about possible oil spills from supertankers off the British Columbia coast while en route to West Coast refineries.

Colombian Riots Kill 8

CALI (AP) — President Misael Pastrana Borrero declared a state of siege in Colombia Friday night and sent troops to the country's campuses after eight persons were killed and 47 wounded in rioting at the University of del Valle.

IRA Snipers Fight Army

Policemen Killed, Wounded

BELFAST (AP) — Two policemen were killed early today as gun battles raged in the firelit streets of this Northern Ireland capital between government forces and snipers of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Two snipers also were believed dead, and four policemen were wounded. The wounds of one were so serious he was administered last rites.

There had been two weeks of uneasy peace in Belfast before violence erupted Friday night, caused by the explosions of several gelignite bombs and fires in the city.

A hail of bullets from automatic weapons cut down three unarmed policemen standing with arms linked between jeering Protestant and Roman Catholic crowds in the Ardoyne district of the city. Two constables who ran to their aid also were hit.

Troops of Britain's Royal Highland Fusiliers returned the fire and reported shooting two civilians, one carrying an automatic weapon.

MAY HAVE GOT THEM

"It is possible that one or both of the gunmen were killed," said Brig. Frank Kitson, the British commander. "We saw the men fall to the ground and then be carried away by their comrades."

In the same area, a Catholic stronghold, a police vehicle was ambushed and its driver shot in the leg. One British soldier was shot in the knee and five others were wounded by bomb fragments.

The latest violence was regarded by authorities as an IRA reprisal for the arrest of 28 Catholic women for demonstrating and fighting with police Friday outside a court. Inside four men were being tried on charges of breaching the peace during a recent IRA funeral.

Advice Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Tom Campbell said Friday he wants to meet Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier in Ottawa for a first-hand briefing on federal government plans to handle transient youth this summer.

U.K. WORKERS TOLD TO STAY OFF JOBS

LONDON (AP) — More than one million British workers have been ordered by their unions to stay home Monday in a 24-hour protest against the Conservative government's anti-strike legislation.

The demonstration is likely to shut down London newspapers and the entire car industry.

Crownex Seeking To Dump Tailings

By AB KENT

Plans to resume copper mining at the Jordan River property of Crownex River property of Crownex International Ltd. include a pollution control application to empty up to one million gallons of ore tailings a day into Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Until a permit is issued enabling the mine to start commercial production by November, pre-production development will slow down from a value of $60,000 to be spent next month to an average $25,000 a month, Crownex president Sidney B. Fowlds said Friday.

He pointed out that while Sunro was operating the mine — it shut down more than two years ago — tailings were pumped through a pipeline to tidewater off the mouth of the Jordan River. Pollution control legislation became effective after that.

Crownex is the successor to previous companies which leased and operated the claims owned by Cominco Ltd.

In its application to the B.C. Pollution Control Board, Disposal Development Ltd., wholly owned by Crownex, seeks the use of a 4,600-foot tailings pipeline to carry waste from the copper milling which will be underground at the mine a short distance off the West Coast Road.

Fowlds said granting of a permit hinges partly on a declaration from the regional district engineer that the dumping doesn't conflict with local bylaws. Engineer Bill Gerry said he has been asked to look into the matter, including seeking advice from other technical people such as fisheries officers.

The application for a permit has not yet been advertised in

Truckers Angry, Vote Set Sunday

Teamsters Union leader Senator Ed Lawson refused to speculate today on the outcome of a vote Sunday by more than 3,000 striking truckers on whether to obey a back-to-work order issued Friday by the cabinet.

Vancouver members will hold their meeting in the Queen Elizabeth Theatre, starting at 2 p.m.

Victoria members, numbering about 80, will meet at the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra.

Lawson was asked what kind of position he would be in if the membership decided to stay on strike.

"That's a highly speculative question," he said. "I wouldn't care to comment on that."

But he said the Teamsters mood was not one of acceptance of government actions.

VERY ANGRY

"They're very angry. It's clearly stripping them of their right to collective bargaining. The companies have the full weight of the government on their side."

If the Teamsters opt to continue their strike, it would be the second time in less than a year that unions have defied Bill 33.

Construction trade unions refused to go back to work after the cabinet invoked Bill 33 July 18. Labor Minister Leslie Peterson, later intervened in the deadlock to bring labor and management leaders together to arrange

Egypt Set to Take Big Four Decision

CAIRO (AP) — The semi-official newspaper Al-Ahram says Egypt is prepared to accept unanimous decisions of the Big Four on the Middle East, including when the ceasefire should expire.

The announcement indicates that the Egyptian government has noted "tangible progress" in indirect peace talks at the United Nations, a condition set by President Anwar Sadat for extending the truce past March 7.

Sadat agreed this month to extend the ceasefire 30 days, its second extension since it began last August to improve conditions for the discussions under Gunnar V. Jarring.

"Egypt will not object in the coming days to any decision adopted unanimously by the Big Four powers, in consultation with UN Secretary-General U Thant and his special representative Ambassador Jarring," the newspaper says. The ambassador of the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union are discussing the Middle East at the United Nations in New York at the same time as Jarring consults with representatives of Egypt, Jordan and Israel.

Labor called the incident a victory in their fight against the controversial labor legislation.

The B.C. Mediation Act provides maximum fines of $10,000 for a union or company and $1,000 for an individual who refuses to comply, plus a daily fine of $150 if the defiance continues.

NOT NAMED

Lawson said two striking members have been threatened with firing if they did not return to work today. He did not name them.

But Tommy Der of Capital Freightways said it would be "very surprising" if any company associated with the Automotive Transport Association had issued such a threat.

"As far as I'm concerned there's no truth to it," he said. "I've got a directive from our association and we're going to keep our doors open for business and we couldn't do that if we fired the men."

The Immigration Act prohibits the landing of anyone admitting or involved in a "crime of moral turpitude."

Don Rosenbloom, the lawyer Paterson first obtained through the Vancouver Committee to aid American War Objectors, said he had made several unsuccessful requests for the immigration adjudicator to allow both sides to consider certain "complicated" legal issues.

Mr. Rosenbloom, who was joined by Mr. Berger on the case, said he did not discuss any allegations made against the youth, or the motives for the hijacking.

He said no charges have been laid against Paterson in Canada.

the B.C. Gazette, but this will be done shortly, Fowlds said.

Meanwhile, he said, the delay is costing $25,000 a month in pre-production expenditure, and he expects to wait at least two months more.

Crownex expects to resume mining largely on a trackless basis compared with the conventional rail-locomotive-hopper car system, which will be retained only where new machinery is impractical.

Up to 1,500 tons of ore a day will be handled, using a total of 130 men, Fowlds said.

Since the early 1960s, when Sunro was operated by Cowichan Copper Co. Ltd., the mine has been flooded, caved, shut down, re-opened and shut down again in the rise and fall of its fortune and the market price of copper.

Car Crash Injures 4

Four persons were injured in a two-car collision at Cloverdale and Oak Friday afternoon in which damage to the cars totalled $1,500.

Rajinder Rose Dheenshaw, 20, of 3793 Panther, suffered lacerations when the small imported car she was driving was in collision with a late-model auto driven by Peter Froelich, 37, of 3785 Carey Rd. Froelich was not injured.

Damage to the Dheenshaw car was $1,500, to Froelich's $1,000.

Three passengers in Miss Dheenshaw's car also were treated at St. Joseph's Hospital for lacerations. They were Joanna Beers, 21, of 930 Southgate; Valerie Tonkin, 22, of 813 Jasmine; and Laura Schwab, 21, of Arrow Road.

Some Progress

WASHINGTON (WP) — Some progress was reported as union and management negotiators met into the evening in an effort to avert the fourth nation-wide railroad strike since 1945 after a congressionally imposed moratorium expires at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

GALLUP POLL

Stanfield, Douglas Draw Equal Praise

BY THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION
(World Copyright Reserved)

Robert Stanfield, as Leader of the Opposition, and Tommy Douglas, retiring leader of the NDP, are appraised by the voters in much the same way, for the jobs they are doing. Just under half the electorate (49 per cent) give Stanfield an excellent or fair rating, while 43 per cent do the same for Douglas. More, however, find Stanfield disappointing (32 per cent) than do Douglas (23 per cent). At the same time about twice as many can't give an estimate for Douglas (34 per cent) as cannot decide for Stanfield (19 per cent).

Both men are also regarded by their own political adherents in a similar vein, with 64 per cent of the Conservatives across Canada, giving Stanfield a favorable rating, compared to 67 per cent among the NDP and other parties, who do the same for Douglas.

One disappointing fact for the NDP is that Stanfield gets a rating as doing an excellent or fair job from a majority of the labor segment (53 per cent) as compared to 39 per cent who give this to Douglas. A surprising facet for many, perhaps, is the fact that the largest segment in labor (41 per cent) can't decide what they think about Douglas, compared to 24 per cent who are undecided about Stanfield.

In a similar study, Trudeau won an excellent or fair rating from 73 per cent of the Canadian people — 93 per cent from his Liberal supporters.

The same question was put to a national sample of the electorate for both Stanfield and Douglas, as was put for Trudeau.

The question: "How would you rate the job Mr. Robert Stanfield is doing as leader of the opposition (Mr. Tommy Douglas, leader of the NDP party who is retiring)—excellent, fair or poor?"

Here's how the two men compare, nationally, among voters for the main political parties, and occupational groups.

British to Leave Persian Gulf Area

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON
LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Edward Heath's Conservative government has decided to pull Britain's troops out of the Persian Gulf area, eliminating even the small token presence it planned to leave behind at the end of 1971.

Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home probably will make the announcement in the House of Commons Monday, authoritative sources reported today.

The policy switch apparently was prompted by resistance from Iran, Saudi Arabia, Iraq and Kuwait to a continued British presence. It marks the end of a campaign pledge by Heath to reverse the plans of former prime minister Harold Wilson's Labor government to leave Britain's east-of-Suez bases.

The Conservatives said in their 1970 campaign that a British presence in the Gulf was essential to protect Britain's oil investments and allies there.

But the Iranians and Saudi Arabians especially have insisted they can maintain peace in the area in spite of continuing feuds among local sheiks over territory and oil.

At one time Britain had hoped to win backing for a token land force on Sharjah at the Gulf's entrance and a token air force unit in Bahrain, off the Trucial states in lower Saudi Arabia.

Before the pullout, the Heath government will work hard to inject new life into a collapsing project for a union of nine Arab lands through which British influence could still be exercised in the region, sources said.

As a substitute for the British presence, Sir Alec is expected to tell Parliament that British warships will visit the area regularly and that Britain will help train and arm local security forces in an area which for more than a century has been under British military protection.

A British pullout could lure other powers into the vacuum that remains. The Soviet Union and Communist China have for some time been trying to improve relations with some countries in the area.

Education Rapport Called For

A researcher who wants to improve education by working within the system called for a closer rapport between student and teacher at the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association's annual conference Friday.

Dr. Laurence Peter, director of the Evelyn Frieden Centre for Prescriptive Teaching, Los Angeles, said instead of calling in experts or setting up special classes, the education establishment should make an effort to find out why a child can't learn.

"In Los Angeles more than 50 per cent of the students are in special classes. We have an escalation of the special class system. I ask you if 50 per cent of the pupils are in special classes how can they be special?"

Peter warned against the dangers of becoming an administrator.

"It's also a fact that administrators never do anything creative. A good teacher who is promoted to the rank of principal gets bored. A good teacher may not be a good administrator."

Peter is co-author of The Peter Principle, the thesis of which is: In a hierarchy every employee tends to rise to his level of incompetence.

Reid Plan Looks Inevitable As Mayor Presses Campaign

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

(An Analysis)

Some new perspectives on Inner Harbor development are in order, what with the rash of meetings and statements on the subject over the last two weeks.

For example, we see a different Sandy Reid in town these days than the one who huffed and puffed and withdrew his $25 million project last Oct. 14. Thursday night at the Empress, Reid was far from suffering withdrawal symptoms.

The details he discussed were those of the original proposal. Yet on Dec. 18 Mayor Courtney Haddock, back from a trip to Vancouver and a meeting with Reid, announced the developer had new plans in the works that would meet objections.

Anyhow, neither Reid nor Haddock seem to have any intention of giving up the idea. But they aren't being at all specific about what the proposal will look like.

Haddock's approach has changed. He's on the offensive now, though his tail gunner is hard at work. He has in effect taken the community development chairmanship into his own hands, not at all disquieted by the fact his appointee, Harold Olafson, is sunning in the Caribbean.

And the mayor was there Thursday night, leading the cheers for Sandy Reid, despite moderator John Di Castro's emphatic request to keep the waterfront discussion on a non-political level.

The fact is, Haddock needs Reid to get something built before his mayoralty term is up. And the betting is that when federal and provincial money comes through to spring urban renewal, Victorians will be treated to their first piece of futurama in the downtown core at the hands of Sandy Reid.

Since we're going to get it, let's not misname the thing. Fort Victoria is the unsuitable, but likely name.

More suitable: The Sandy Reid Simulated Saturn Rocket Launching Pad.

And up top: The J. Courtney Haddock Revolving Restaurant.

While we're at it, add The Peter Pollen Promenade.

And speaking of Pollen, who started it all by criticizing the Reid center, Haddock may find that stripping him of position in planning was a strategic error.

If Haddock had left Pollen to put the pieces back together, then Pollen alone would have to answer for his work, whether or not he runs for re-election in December. As it stands he could disappear now without ever having to oversee the placing of one brick on the Inner Harbor waterfront.

But having taken Pollen's job for himself, Haddock is left with the pieces, and is still smarting. He's saying now that one reason he couldn't rebuff Pollen is that Marathon Realty refuses to discuss their waterfront plans with him.

In fact Pollen has discussed the latest Marathon ideas with Marathon, and they're all on friendly terms.

Week At City Hall

Haddock the healer is using the well-trampled theory that high-rise development is the key to saving the city from block apartments and urban sprawl.

Since when did the mayor of Victoria have any control over the outlying municipalities where only urban sprawl can take place?

And what steps is he taking to introduce zoning rules or alter building codes—that would stop the tide of stuco blocks?

Haddock's true effect in this latest campaign has little to do with the future of the city as a whole. He's in the promotion line now, trying to loosen up the purse strings of high finance. It's the same kind of thing Sandy Reid does when he talks up the wonders and supposed world renown of Reid-inspired developments.

FROM LEGISLATURE

B.C. Debates Shock Newcomer

By BRUCE YEMEN
(An Analysis)

The question that Robert Strachan repeatedly asked, in a loud, angry voice to nobody in particular, was this: "How can I go and talk to school children about parliamentary democracy?"

Strachan, the veteran MLA from Cowichan-Malahat, was standing in the corridor just outside the door to the legislative chamber from which he had stalked in rage a few minutes earlier last Wednesday afternoon.

He had walked out after what must have struck him as some final insult in an afternoon of rule-mangling and bungling by the government in its determination to pass a resolution about the general trucking industry work stoppage.

SOUNDING OFF

Now, the legislature had adjourned for a few minutes and a gaggle of MLAs, cabinet ministers and reporters were within earshot as Strachan sounded off.

"Now, Bob ... now, Bob ...," said Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan, soothingly, as if to suggest that things weren't nearly as bad as Strachan seemed to think.

But just the day before, a newcomer to the press gallery had walked into the press room shaking his head after a spell in the legislative gallery during debate on Premier Bennett's estimates.

Never, he said, had he ever seen so much parliamentary rule-breaking and generally obnoxious behavior, and he had covered four other Canadian legislatures.

He used the word "hatred" to describe the feelings he had sensed on the floor of the legislature.

FIRST TIME

Then he qualified his remarks by saying he may have been unduly affected by it all, this being his first time in the B.C. legislature.

After a time, he might even get used to it, he supposed.

But he hadn't yet seen the low point of the entire week. It came as Strachan stormed from the house Wednesday afternoon, when Premier Bennett tabled written answers to 26 questions on the order paper.

These were some of the same answers that only the day before Bennett had been told were absolutely necessary for the opposition to have if they were to give proper consideration to his spending estimates.

Liberal Leader Pat McGee had even asked Bennett to postpone finishing his estimates until the questions were answered. Bennett ignored the request.

POSITIVE VALUE

To make those answers available just 24 hours later smacked of the kind of cynicism and arrogance that a man could display only if he saw a positive value in it.

The value for Bennett may be that it so enrages the opposition that the standard of behavior in the legislature and in B.C. politics is kept mean and low-down. And guess who wins that kind of fight every time.

To further depress the view of the legislature's quality, there is now a survey of U.S. state legislatures which indirectly suggests that, in addition to nastiness and rule-breaking, the B.C. legislature is also functionally bad.

The survey, by a non-profit organization, rated California as tops in legislative quality and Alabama as the worst, in 50th place.

LIKE B.C.

Some of the qualities that made Alabama's chamber rate so low are startlingly similar to weaknesses of the B.C. legislature.

They include the relatively few sitting days of the legislature during the year, the lack of office space, resulting in MLAs doing public business in corridors and cafeterias, the lack of proper research assistance for members and "incredible executive domination" of the legislature.

NO CREDIT

The parliamentary system is quite different from the U.S. legislative system, of course, but it is no credit to B.C. that individual Alabama legislators are still vastly more influential in shaping legislation than are MLAs here.

The B.C. legislative committee system has been badly eroded in comparison with some other provinces. The

Market Opposed

LONDON (Reuter) — A group opposed to British entry in the European Common Market published a mock advertisement in a magazine headed "H.M. Government Limited, auctioneers and valuers." It went on: "For sale by Rome Treaty — the freehold of England, Scotland, Wales and the northern part of Ireland together with the undisputed right to frame and impose laws upon the lands and upon all Her Majesty's subjects."

A Victoria chartered accountant suggested Friday the recent B.C. Telephone application for rate increases may be a cover to forestall a transport commission order to reduce rates in view of current profits.

C. David Moore, partner in Rickard, Crawford and Co., reported to Victoria Chamber of Commerce directors he was not as impressed with B.C. Tel's brief as he had expected to be, and recommended the chamber remain neutral.

Directors decided to turn the subject back to its government affairs committee for a meeting with the company's Vancouver Island manager Gordon M. Smith next week. A recommendation to support or reject the proposed increases — up to 15 per cent — will follow that meeting.

In his assessment of the company brief to the transport commission, Moore noted the limit of expected return on investment as set down by the transport commission is 6.2 to 6.8 per cent.

The telephone company reports making 7.08 per cent in 1969, 7.02 per cent in 1970 and 6.95 per cent anticipated this year, all above the suggested upper limit.

"Is B.C. Tel asking for a rate increase as an attempt to forestall the CTC ordering a rate reduction, and not really in anticipation of having the rate increase granted? Maybe yes, maybe no," Moore said.

He also suggested the range of return on investment may be outdated in view of recent increases in borrowing rates, but more recently interest rates have declined and this may partly obviate any need to alter the range of permissible profit, Moore said.

The accountant also wondered whether increased capital requirements should be met out of increased revenue or through new share subscriptions. B.C. Tel points to cash needs for continued expansion.

Moore concluded that without increased return on in-

Ice Hazard To Wellheads

OTTAWA (CP) — Icebergs are a manageable menace to underseas oil drilling in northern waters but they pose serious unresolved threats to producing wells, says an exploration engineer.

Enormous bergs can gouge thirty-foot-deep trenches for great distances along the ocean bottom as they move before wind and current.

Any wellhead that gets in the way hasn't a chance unless, perhaps, it is buried deep below the mudline, Jean Duval, an engineer with Eastcan Exploration Ltd., of Calgary said Wednesday.

Mr. Duval said drilling from mobile platforms is feasible even in iceberg-infested waters.

"The biggest problem is to protect the bottom equipment against the effects of the grounded iceberg," he told an earth sciences symposium dealing with offshore eastern Canada.

Survival rate of a submarine Christmas tree — the wellhead valves and other apparatus — is estimated at between two to four years in latitudes of 65 degrees north. Normal life of an oilfield is 20 years. Farther north the density of icebergs and the risk of collisions is increased.

Dr. Bouchard still makes house calls.

The tiny village of Rock Island, Quebec, gets an annual average snowfall of 100 inches. And the temperature can sit below zero for weeks.

So when Dr. Gilles Bouchard's patients can't get to him, he goes to them. By Volkswagen.

They say around Rock Island that it makes folks feel better just seeing his little red VW chugging about the countryside.

But for him, a Volkswagen is more a necessity than an eccentricity. In fact, it's just what the doctor ordered.

His practice covers 500 square miles. And what with churning through drifts along snow-choked backroads in winter, or slogging through mud and slush in the spring, he logs 15,000 miles a year.

And while travel by Volkswagen isn't the fastest method known to man, we were delighted to hear that a bug can still win a race with the stork.

One sub-zero morning, a baby was on the way 20 miles from town. But the doctor wasn't. His other car, a big fast sedan, wouldn't start.

What to do?

"In spite of the cold, the bug started right away," says Dr. Bouchard, "And I made it just in the nick of time."

Mother, baby, doctor and Volkswagen are doing just fine.

Everyone Is Involved

THE ISSUE OF THE PUBLIC interest, so often forgotten in labor disputes, should remain paramount in the current trucking strike. Both Premier Bennett and Attorney-General Peterson have rightly raised the point, and it is not invalidated by accusations from other spokesmen that their words are politically motivated. The fact still remains that the public is vitally dependent on the transportation system in which trucks play an essential part.

Almost every other industry is dependent to some extent on trucking services, and Vancouver Island is particularly vulnerable. Thus truck transport cannot be considered as just another commercial enterprise: it is a key adjunct to other industries as well. Trucking thereby takes on many of the characteristics of a public utility — and also many of the responsibilities.

The present strike situation should be viewed in this context. It provided the background rationale for the government's action in issuing a return-to-work order under the authority of existing legislation and Wednesday's approval by the Legislature. Now that the order has been issued the union's course is clear. The law of the land must be obeyed.

The teamsters' union has a record of good citizenship. Presumably the men will return to their jobs on Monday. The governmental order, while sending the dispute to the Mediation Commission for a binding decision, still permits an opportunity for a direct settlement between the two sides. This is a welcome provision in view of the union's stated aversion to meeting with the Mediation Commission with its compulsory powers.

It will be well if management and labor can achieve a settlement between them without involving at this time the potential problems that are inherent in the Commission's participation. But there must be a settlement and there must be a resumption of work in this essential industry. The requirements of the public, as well as of the trucking firms and their employees, call for it.

Aid According to Plan

THE PRINCIPAL MOTIVATION of the Canadian International Development Agency (formerly the External Aid Office) is practical as well as humanitarian since aid to developing countries which is properly applied can promote world peace, perhaps better than the emplacement of ICBMs or the deployment of great armies. Canadian aid policies are illustrated and amply justified in South Vietnam, a country which has become identified with the weariness and despair of war.

Canadian aid has already established a tuberculosis hospital and a physical rehabilitation centre in South Vietnam, and a decision will be made shortly on a public health training and demonstration centre in the Mekong Delta in An Giang province. To date Canada has spent about $8 millions in medical and other humanitarian aid to South Vietnam. The training centre in An Giang would require an initial outlay of $1 million, and about $1.5 million plus operating costs over the first five years. Medical personnel trained in An Giang would work throughout South Vietnam.

Dr. Michael Jutras, 31, of Montreal, who is expected to be in charge of the centre says of the Canadian medical effort in South Vietnam: "It's a slow program but, especially in the past year, we've started to have a strong influence on the rest of the country."

The effectiveness of our medical aid is, naturally, affected by the progress of the war and after the lunar new year offensives in 1968 and 1969 there were "reappraisals" of the program. The proposed Canadian centre in An Giang would, however, be located in a comparatively peaceful province.

Canada's peaceful efforts in South Vietnam compare favorably with similar efforts of other countries. As an essay in compassionate diplomacy and an investment in world security the proposed centre deserves support. It represents a kind of escalation there whose results will be friendship not frenzy and fear.

Little Drops of Water

WHEN ANY ARID PART OF the United States devises a means of using "lost" water within its own boundaries, the accomplishment is of some importance to Canada. It reduces American pressure on this country for our water, which is not for export.

The reported accomplishment of scientists in a section of Arizona is a drop in the bucket in relation to the over-all problem. Yet it emphasizes the intensity with which some Americans are researching means of meeting fresh water demands.

Two little mountain streams near the town of Tempe have, for years, flowed for two months annually and then dried up. Now they have been encouraged to flow year-round. The water has been made available for the creeks by removing chaparral from the surrounding area.

The roots of this bush draw moisture from a water table customarily four to six feet below the earth's surface. Removal, or control, of the growth leaves the moisture still in the subsoil to drain eventually into the streams. In consequence the stream flow is maintained.

This is a small success in a water-starved region. Yet it is a pilot project of substantial interest and perhaps of more importance as an index of determination to conserve for use supplies now wasted — particularly by pollution, which is a major factor in current U.S. scarcities.

The Canadian Accent

WITH TONGUE IN CHEEK THE other day, Mr. Diefenbaker asked Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier if he considered putting out a white paper on the meaning of "Canadian accents" so that all might understand what the CBC had in mind should it decide to get rid of non-Canadian accents.

There are, of course, certain modes of speech used by different citizens of this country which are offensive to others — just as the BBC accent at one time offended a number of Britons. But what, if any, is the preferred accent? Is it the delicate distortion that occurs when descendants of the early French settlers translate their words into English? Is it the breeze from the Hebrides, or the Highlands, that might have been the Canadian accent of some of the fur traders who ran heavily to Scottish origins? Is it the "cultured" English of people trained in some of Canada's private schools? Or is it the language ascribed to some people from Trawna (spelled Toronto)?

Perhaps a solution may be found by adopting the accents of the voices announcing flights in airports throughout the country — a mode of speech equally incomprehensible to people from any part of the world.

Designation of Okanagan Mountain, across the lake from Peachland and within 15 miles of Penticton and Kelowna, as a Class A provincial park has been the five-year project of the Okanagan Similkameen Parks Society. The concept has won provincial government attention and this fine area of timber, trails, beaches, boat harbors and recreation sites may yet be saved from subdivision and industrial use as a result of widespread public support. Sponsors feel that returns from tourism will justify the project as an economic as well as a social asset.

FROM OTTAWA

'Absolute' Quebec Rights Splitting the NDP

THE April convention of the New Democratic Party was to have been the climax of a simple leadership contest. It has acquired a different and deeper significance as a result of the increasingly bitter struggle over future policy which now divides the more moderate leaders from the Wafflers and their allies of the Quebec wing. Stephen Lewis, the Ontario leader has put the issue in clear terms in a speech at Waterloo. Attacking the principle of "self-determination" for Quebec, he repudiated "any proposition for collaboration, alliance or veiled support with those who seek the dismemberment of our country." He added: "We have nothing to gain save our permanent and well-deserved oblivion."

On the same weekend the Quebec group endorsed self-determination and decided not to participate in provincial elections — thus leaving a clear field for the Parti Quebecois in urban ridings where the NDP has some following. Thus, the struggle concerns fundamentals. It is not unlike the deus nations conflict which wrecked the Conservative convention of 1967, but is less clouded by semantics, goes much deeper and, on the one side, is plainly a political response to the upsurge of a separatist party in Quebec.

What is at stake, as Mr. Lewis frankly recognizes, is the future of the NDP as a force in federal politics. This is not solely because Rene Levesque is unpopular in English Canada or because the actions of the Quebec wing will be widely, and naturally, interpreted in all parts of the country as "veiled support" for the separatist movement.

Western

The difficulty is that a party committed to self-determination, as demanded by the Quebec wing, cannot be a federalist party. This is perhaps clearer from the language approved by the weekend convention in Montreal than from that of the Wafflers themselves.

As reported by Canadian Press, the resolution reads: "Quebec has an absolute right to self-determination, that is, to decide for itself the degree of sovereignty which suits it in all fields." At first glance, such words seem to breathe the spirit of democracy and fair play. No doubt the authors would be willing enough to extend the same principle to other provinces. (They might have qualms about extending it to groups or areas within those provinces, although it is difficult to see why.)

But federalism implies a division of sovereignty. In Canada, the national government is sovereign in some fields, the provinces in others. Powers can be reallocated if there is a consensus through formal change in the constitution.

But Ottawa can be challenged in the courts if it invades provincial fields and, similarly, provincial legislation may be found ultra vires if it encroaches on federal preserves.

This system has developed naturally in Canada because there were no sovereign units at Confederation: The powers in Section 91 were inherited by Ottawa, those in Section 92 by the provinces, in each case from the imperial authority. What is now proposed is a quite new principle.

Quebec's Assertions

The assertion is that Quebec has an "absolute" right to decide on the degree of sovereignty which suits its needs. But such needs are interpreted differently from time to time.

Obviously, Premier Bourassa claims more (Mr. Levesque very much more) than Mr. Duplessis and his predecessors claimed. This is not due solely to changes in fashions of thought; new problems constantly arise which were not foreseen by constitution-makers. This happened in the case of radio and aeronautics and will doubtless happen again.

But if absolute right resides in a province to choose what powers it will exercise, what it will forgo in accordance with a government's estimate of what suits it today, the same right will apply in future if another government has a change of mind. A central government in these circumstances could be nothing more than a creature of the provinces. Further, the other partners in such an arrangement could have no guarantees of its permanency. Neither could the citizen, whose rights a constitution is supposed to protect.

In fact, the Quebec wing seems to be thinking clearly, and the Waffle in a more muddled fashion, not of a federal state, but of an alliance. Nations which enter alliances concede a portion of sovereignty, usually for stated periods, as in the case of NATO. Withdrawal does not necessarily wait on the expiry of the contract, since absolute right may come into play at any time.

The Quebec New Democrats elaborated their thought in a second political orientation resolution. This said that it would be mutually profitable — it sounds rather like a commercial transaction — to develop the closest ties with socialists of English-speaking Canada "with a view to forming a new alliance between the two peoples which make up Canada at present."

The Waffle

Good-bye nation. Enter the alliance. Mr. Lewis is quite right and so is Frank Howard, who earlier denounced the Waffle-separatist flirtation. The NDP, burdened with the Montreal resolution, could not be a federal force for the fundamental reason that the resolution rules out federalism.

As matters now stand, Mr. Levesque is getting more than "veiled support." In his own province, he has got the NDP out of the way, he has obtained at the same time their endorsement of self-determination, as approved by out-of-province Wafflers. This may not amount to much in terms of political muscle, but even a little must be welcome since nothing of public record has been extracted from him in return.

A Delayed Pull-Out Indicated by Laos Results

THE critical lesson to be learned thus far from the Laos incursion is that Vietnamization cannot safely be forced at the present break-neck pace. What has happened along Route 9 in the Lao-ton panhandle is that the South Vietnamese Army (ARVN) has bitten off more than it can readily chew. Even with American air and logistic support, it has not been able to strike effectively against a position vigorously defended by the enemy. Results, of course, are not yet all in. The picture could change.

Moreover, the job assigned to the ARVN — severing the Ho Chi Minh trail — was formidably difficult, one for which American commanders once requested 200,000 men.

Congressional limitations on American participation in the venture — ruling out, for example, even the use of advisers — have multiplied the difficulties.

Handing Over the War

Still, when all this has been said, it remains true that estimates of ARVN capacities are having to be revised. The plan to hand the war over to Saigon this summer, with American help thereafter in the air, in supplies, and in communications, is almost certainly premature.

As has often happened before, the ability of air power to tip the military balance has proved to have been exaggerated. Weather being uncertain, enemy anti-aircraft capabilities unexpectedly great, and terrain unfamiliar, air support for the Laos operation has been well short of decisive.

The quality of ARVN leadership also appears to have been spotty. Planners apparently sent armor into terrain for which it was not suited. Some field commanders lacked imagination and daring — though others have fought well.

This clearly leads to two conclusions: ● Completion of the American withdrawal from ground combat this summer will have to be delayed.

● If major undertakings like the effort to cut the Ho Chi Minh trail are to succeed, Americans will have to participate — as field advisers, at the very least, and probably as foot-slogging infantry.

These are not happy conclusions, but they are inevitable. The contrast between the success of the Cambodia venture last year, with American infantry participation, and the Laos incursion this year, without it, is vivid and eloquent.

It does not follow that the ARVN will never be able to deal with the enemy, and that the United States therefore should out and run. South Vietnam has made great progress in the past year. It merely means that the pace of Vietnamization will have to be slowed.

Whether American public opinion will take such a disappointment calmly is an open question. The answer might clearly

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

A hiker moving around the lake at Thetis Lake Park may find many of our early spring flowers coming into bloom.

Already visible is spring gold, with its carrot-like leaves and its tightly packed cluster of yellow flowers.

If you look closely you will be able to find several buds of the Easter lily among its mottled leaves. Some of the buds are showing the white of the petals. It won't be long before they will bloom.

Look among the mossy rock slopes for the dainty satin-flower with its leaves like blades of grass. This beautiful flower with its reddish-purple trumpet-like flower is one of our earliest of spring blossoms. It has but a short life — a few days and it fades away.

If you search you can find the little rusty saxifrage. Look at the underside of the leaves. You will notice its reddish, woolly appearance. It is just coming into bloom and the stem will soon carry other clusters.

Search some of the more open, rocky knolls and you will be able to find the tiny white bloom of one of the miners' lettuce (montia) with its thin grass-like leaves that spread out from the root stock. This little plant is rather inconspicuous and therefore is often missed. It, too, like many of our very early flowers, does not last long.

As you drop down the hill to the little creek that flows into Prior Lake you can find several arum lilies (skunk cabbage) in bloom with the golden spathe and the fleshy spike that soon will be covered with tiny yellow flowers.

When you walk along the trail as it borders the water, you will see the old brown stalks of the cattails. Look down in the water and you will see the new green shoots reaching up for the sunlight.

Close by there are several bushes of the scopulalis. On the twigs are reddish dots that look like a rust and the little leaves are curled. This shrub has male and female flowers on separate bushes. It is also called the soap-berry or Canada buffalo berry.

As you turn by the culvert look across the lake where the water reflects as in a mirror the trees that are growing on the little island. Perhaps you will be able to spot a pair of mallards which have set up a nesting site.

Further along the trail there are some rocky cliffs that now are covered with the polypody ferns. Here they hang down in long flowing clusters that look like a wonderful, green waterfall. Thetis Lake park is one of the best places to see so much of this rather fascinating and lovely fern.

Stop at the crest of the hill and listen. If your ears are good you will hear the twitterings of the little kinglets that flit from twig to twig in the tall firs, and where the alder grove is growing you can often see the flash of the yellow on the pine siskins as they search for insects and perhaps new buds.

We feel, for instance, that even a 20 per cent greater coverage of Canadian news would be a very welcome change in what appears to be your present policy of publishing an overwhelming percentage of news and syndicated editorials and articles from the American press, combined with what amounts to daily advertising flyers from local business. Even your front page news pictures are frequently American.

Canada is a large country and many things are happening in it every day which, if the people are to be informed, need to be presented in much greater detail as news and comment (including, if we may stoop to the local scene, the hitting of the legislature for this province). While it may seem strange to you, we like to feel that we are Canadians living in Canada, and that what goes on in all parts of this country is of more concern and interest to us than local events in some part of the United States which you so consistently report. — Mr. and Mrs. J. # The Tensions Of a Continent Fuse Uruguay

By JOSEPH NOVITSKI

MONTEVIDEO — Uruguay, simultaneously in the throes of an urban guerrilla campaign and a presidential election this year, has taken on the appearance of a laboratory for some of South America's most fashionable current political ideas.

The small country's urban guerrillas, the Tupamaros, appear to be fighting the elected government to prove the Cuban-inspired theory that only armed revolution can bring about Marxist social and economic change in South America.

The parties of the left who do not share the Tupamaros' faith have imported a successful idea from Chile. Communists, Socialists and Christian Democrats are manoeuvring to form an electoral front behind one candidate with a broad platform of the sort that helped Dr. Salvador Allende, a Marxist, to become the elected President of Chile last year.

From the left to the right, politicians and analysts interviewed here in recent days identified the two newest political ideas in the country as foreign, and expressed bafflement over the success of the revolutionary Tupamaros in a country without a large, desperately poor class with nothing to lose.

But beneath the puzzlement there appeared a real desperation over 18 years of economic decline and the lack of leadership in the two traditional political parties that have governed Uruguay for more than a century.

"The truth is that people are absolutely fed up with the traditional parties, the traditional way and the government," said Carlos Quijano, the director of the leftist weekly "Marcha," known for its high intellectual quality throughout the Spanish-speaking world. His phrase was echoed almost exactly by two well-to-do matrons at a dinner party in a beachside suburb and a young socialist communications worker in the drab, deteriorating centre of this capital city.

The traditional way in Uruguay was a highly individual and deeply-rooted democracy that was borne along by the prosperity of a small, fertile country made rich by the sale of wool, meat and leather abroad. When the world market for these exports slumped, beginning in 1953, so did the economy that supported government payrolls and pensions to almost one-third of the population. According to government figures, the gross national product declined by 15 per cent between 1956 and 1968 and began to expand again only in 1969 and 1970.

President Jorge Pacheco Areco has been the target for economic discontent that has spilled over into social unrest. His enemies, the Tupamaros, have fed on it, although Uruguay's 2.8 million people have maintained a per capita income of $590, one of the highest in Latin America. (The New York Times)

Canada has a lot to be ashamed of

'Make Honest Woman of CBC Or Kick Her Out on Streets'

We hear the phrase "wishy-washy liberalism" bandied about a lot these days.

Until I read the section dealing with public broadcasting in the recent Report of the Special Senate Committee on Mass Media, I lacked a clear understanding of what that phrase meant. Now I know.

It means recognizing that an institution is badly in need of reform and then recommending, after a flurry of glib platitudes, that no basic reform take place.

The Cop-out

The conclusions reached by Senator Keith Davey and his committee colleagues concerning the future of the CBC are a major contribution to the central Canadian tragedy, the cop-out compromise.

One of the essentials of wishy-washy liberalism is ambivalence. On the one hand, the Davey committee reports itself profoundly shocked by a warning from CBC president George Davidson that the corporation's dependence on commercial advertising is affecting the quality and nature of prime-time programming.

The CBC, says the Davey report, "must be financed in such a way that the head of the CBC need never say something like that again."

On the other hand, the report not only insists that the CBC remain in the commercial field but also urges the corporation to increase its advertising revenue.

The justification for this stand, as far as can be determined from the sort of muddled writing the report takes pains to condemn elsewhere, is contained in one flat statement: "It is the CBC's commercial revenue is a needed buffer between it and Parliament." Those of us who reject this premise, who suggest the slight risk of possible partiality mentary interference is infinitely preferable to the present reality of massive commercial domination, are dismissed as "public idealists."

Despite Dr. Davidson's warning, the report rambles on about improving the efficiency of the CBC's sales department as if there were some semblance of a public network left to exploit. Every regular living-room viewer knows this is nonsense.

Leaving aside a handful of unmarketable highbrow programs, the CBC already mounts one of the most commercial-infested prime-time television services in the world.

It is the only TV network in the world that can somehow extract four-fifths of the operating costs from its viewers in order that they can be captured by advertising for as much as one-fifth of their viewing time.

It is, very probably, the only public broadcasting agency in the world with a commercial policy so callous that it can break a four-year-old's heart.

Kids Excited

Last November the CBC screened a charming 25-minute cartoon special, Horton Hears A Who. It was heralded for days in advance by one of the heaviest promotion campaigns I've seen — all of which was indirect drumming for Horton's sole sponsor, the Mattel toy company.

By air time I'll bet 50 per cent of all Canadian kids under 10 were waiting bright-eyed for the delicate Dr. Seuss fable to begin.

They were rewarded by a savage concession to mammon. The half-hour slot was fractured four times for a total of seven blaring 30-second messages plus two 10-second sponsorship announcements.

The fact that these commercials involve photography that may mislead children, generate bitterness in low-income homes and plant consumer motivations in a way that could raise fundamental questions about advertising ethics is almost beside the point. In this case it was the accumulative effect that did the damage.

By the third break my younger son was in tears and his 5½-year-old brother was threatening to drive his reliable, Canadian-made tractor through the TV screen.

Mood Shattered

Perhaps more heart-breaking still is the way commercialism destroys the CBC's own best productions. The Theatre Canada series, based on 13 Canadian short stories was, beyond doubt, the finest English-speaking drama seen anywhere this season.

The effect depended largely on mood. Creative writers, actors and directors labored lovingly to create an atmosphere as fragile as a falling maple leaf.

Yet every Thursday at roughly 9:15 p.m. the mood was shattered for two minutes of hard sell for such artistic necessities as cars and cooked ham.

If the series had to have commercials, why couldn't they be at the beginning and end?

In other less visible ways commercialism affects all the shows imported from the United States. The U.S. networks voluntarily limit themselves to six minutes of advertising in every prime-time hour.

The CBC sells eight minutes. Thus anything from 50 seconds to two minutes is cut out of

A World Without Animals?

By F. A. KNELMAN

In North America alone, between the years 1 and 1850 only one species became extinct. Between 1850 and 1950 about 30 species have become extinct.

The world rate of species extinction and species endangered is also increasing. More than 1,000 species of vertebrates alone face extinction, and, if this rate continues to increase, the next millennium will see a world without animals.

We are in a state of extinction crisis. Technology is the new flood. We need another Noah's Ark to save the animals.

What about Canada, our own country, so rich in natural resources and wildlife? Among birds seriously threatened with extinction are the tundra white-fronted goose, trumpeter swan, prairie chicken, whooping crane, peregrine falcon, Hudsonian godwit and eskimo curlew.

Also threatened are a variety of birds of prey. The seriously threatened mammals are the northern swift fox, glacier bear, barren ground grizzly, sea otter, polar bear, big horn sheep, black-footed ferret, eastern panther, Atlantic walrus and wood bison.

Add to these a number of species of fish, crustaceans and a variety of flowers, ferns and trees.

Canada has everything to be ashamed of. And we have only begun.

The opening up of the Arctic may be the rape of our last frontier of wildlife and wilderness. We have already corrupted the Eskimo by paying them to act as guides for jet-set safaris to hunt the polar bear.

The World Wildlife Fund (Canada) is making a major contribution to conservation. It is part of the World Wildlife Fund founded on Oct. 16, 1961, comprising 12 national appeals. Fortunately the arguments for wildlife and other conservation involve basic advantages for humans.

One cannot exaggerate the economic advantages to humans of the conservation and the wise use of renewable resources like wildlife, wilderness, forests and soil. All of these are bound together by a complex web of sustaining balances and inter-relationships embodying the ecological principle.

The cost of disturbing this balance can be incredibly high. Nobody can be certain of the ecological benefits lost or hazards gained by wilful destruction.

Farming the waters (hydro-culture) like farming the land can derive great economic benefits while practicing conservation at the same time. Violation of this can mean a costly payment that persists for centuries.

The destruction of forests and soil erosion, like the extermination of fish, involves staggering costs to society. By wantonly destroying the irreplaceable or even the renewable not only are the economic consequences disastrous but this violation of the ecological principle could have grave consequences for human survival.

Conservation is not hoarding but a technique for assuring the continuity of supply of renewable resources through a balance of harvest and renewal. Resource management is a better phrase to describe this vitally necessary function. This is as true for animals and plants as it is for other materials.

When Advertising Falls Price Is Paid in News

THE NATION
An Editorial

Television is feeling the pinch of the general recession as well as the loss of cigarette advertising, which constituted 10 per cent of its income.

As might be expected the three networks are cutting back in those areas in which public need is greatest and where there is the greatest opportunity for expansion and improvement.

Documentaries are being curtailed. News programs are also being cut and trimmed.

It was of course predictable that news on the air would sooner or later face some such stringency. "We're all aware of the fact," Reuben Frank of NBC is quoted as saying, "that commercial television has no income that does not come from advertising and that the income is down."

In fact, any news media entirely dependent on advertising are vulnerable. But now that the public has become increasingly dependent on television for its news, there is a real danger that it will be less adequately served than it has been, and frankly there has always been room for improvement.

The public must understand — and there is evidence that the word is slowly getting through — that it has not paid the full cost of news and opinion since the 1890s, when advertisers began to subsidize the media.

For nearly a century the public has been the beneficiary of a service the cost of which was underwritten by advertisers.

For example, no mass circulation magazine could today survive on subscription income. In the past the danger of this dependency has been latent, but today advertising is itself under heavy attack from a dozen different quarters and there is reason to believe that the period of splashy and expensive selling is over.

At the same time, a section of the public is becoming increasingly aware that our free press is heavily mortgaged — to advertisers.

It is also becoming highly critical of the performance of the media, printed and electronic.

In a dozen communities newsmen have launched publications the purpose of which is to fix a spotlight on the shortcomings of the local media.

"Inside media" publications, and newsletters, here and there, have mounted savage attacks on aspects of commercial television.

The phenomenon of the underground press is further evidence that many consumers of news and opinion — particularly the young — distrust the established media, because of their sponsorship as much as their performance. They also seek a different news emphasis.

Some of these new ventures are themselves dependent on advertising, but most are not. As the public grows more aware of the media — as they become legitimate objects of consumer curiosity and criticism — the dependence on advertising will be recognized as both a danger and a limitation.

As circumstances are now proving, advertising is not always a reliable source of income, quite apart from the other disadvantages inherent in the subvention of the media by advertisers.

Dream of a One Big Peace Union

By ART STOTT

One of the appealing, silly stories that came out of the Six Day War in the Middle East concerned the young Israeli in the tank moving into Arab territory. As the vehicle penetrated more deeply into hostile land, a company of entrenched Arabs opened fire on it. Bullets were spanging on the sides of the tank when suddenly the top of the turret flipped open. The young Israeli's head rose through the opening and he yelled at the Arabs: "Careful, you guys. There are people in here. Somebody might get hurt."

I appreciate the sentiments of the young Israeli and his concern for the safety of others. I hope it extended beyond the tank, and assume that universal acceptance of his point of view would eliminate the killing and the maiming, leaving war as harmless as a pillow fight.

Certainly some of the young men who opted out of the United States draft feel the same way. The old "dulce et decorum est . . ." spirit is not now as valid as it once seemed to be. What's good about dying prematurely anyhow? Wouldn't it be a finer and more glorious thing to live for your country?

The concept, in modern context, is pretty unrealistic. But it's not new.

Still, the unusual stories coming from Sweden, about the lockout of the military officers' union, suggest an interesting fantasy. Suppose all military establishments were unionized. Suppose universal acceptance were given to that familiar term of employment protecting union members from injury. Suppose, further, that the worldwide military union voted unanimously to strike if the safety clauses of their agreement were violated.

The result could be more effective than the strike led by Lysistrata in Aristophanes' drama of 415 B.C. when, within the play, the ladies went on strike against husbands and boy friends until the males called off their war. Bit of a pity, though, that Lysistrata is generally accepted as comedy.

Fantastic, of course, the whole idea — just as fantastic as disarmament conferences where nations attempt to preserve their defences while encouraging potential opponents to dismantle theirs. No one in authority has taken very seriously the statement, between the wars, of Maxim Litvinov, that the way to disarm was to disarm. So now we have the highly unrealistic situation of major powers with sufficient armaments to kill the entire population of the world several times over, as well as to roast the earth to a crisp.

We're kept away, at least temporarily, from another world war by what they call the balance of terror. And if it weren't for the balance of terror, what would happen to innumerable national economies? Think of the unemployment if we were all to go out of the arms business and convert military personnel into a world-wide pacifist union constructively engaged in providing civilian needs and services — even population control forces.

Oddly enough, circumstances have driven Japan part way to that calamity. By terms dictated at the end of the war, Japan is not supposed to embark upon any more foreign aggressions, has consequently diverted its manpower and productive capacities largely to civilian industry and commerce. You just have to look at the number of Japanese cars running around our streets and read about the country's electronic output to realize how it's withering on the vine.

It's a prospect that shouldn't worry us. There's little chance of complete international adoption of the pacifist military union idea, no matter what imaginings the Swedish incidents may have stimulated. The old Tubal Cain message doesn't get through. Who wants ploughshares when you might get fighter planes if you work it right?

And yet, the idea flickers like a fire-fly. Some people do want agricultural tractors, if not ploughshares. Instead of "conscientious objector" are no longer quite the epithet they have been in occasion. And it seems less objectionable to more people now that some individuals don't cotton to the idea of going out to kill or be killed. The concern of the little guy in the Israeli tank story isn't altogether a joke.

But if you're inclined to try to organize a pacifist military union, check into the law first. You might turn out to be an enemy of the state, be charged with treason, or, at best, be put down as a trouble-making crackpot. We all want peace, of course, but on our terms.

Uvic Complaints 'Serious Error'

A University of Victoria psychology professor admitted Thursday he had made a "serious error of judgment" in having his class send phoney letters of complaint to several local businessmen.

The letters, sent last Friday, brought swift reaction from disturbed businessmen and harsh criticism from Bill Tindall, manager of the Better Business Bureau.

Prof. Lorne Rosenbloom said today: "I'm very sorry about the whole thing — it was really unintentional."

EXPERIMENT

Rosenbloom said the project was set as an experiment, with three types of letters being used, ranging from "nice" to "harsh," in order to determine which received "the most positive response."

Tindall called the project "deplorable" and quoted statements in the letters such as "It's profiteers like you that ruin our country."

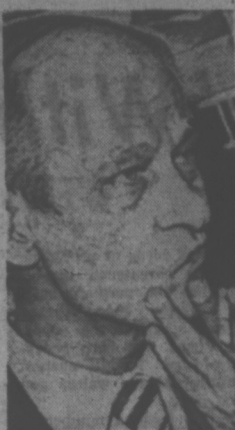

"The whole thing does little to promote good relations between the university students and the business community," Tindall said.

He said that one businessman had gone to see the writer of the letter he received and offered a refund. The student eventually admitted that no purchase had been made and declined the refund.

Tindall said the letters were particularly worrying to businessmen who were recent arrivals in this country or involved in the food-retail business.

"New businessmen who don't understand English as well as they might could become really agitated. A food catering business is rigidly controlled by health departments and such unjustified complaints are intolerable."

"I know one businessman who had his whole staff upset trying to get to the bottom of the matter. None of these things were taken into consideration."

Escaper Saves Travel Costs

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Convicted murderer Arthur James Kendall saved the penitentiary service the cost of transferring him to British Columbia from Ontario.

Kendall failed to return to prison in Kingston, Ont., from a day's leave of absence Feb. 13 and was captured Wednesday in Terrace.

He had previously applied for a transfer to the B.C. Penitentiary here. While he was away, the transfer came through.

By DON MACPHERSON
QUEBEC (CP) — Rene Levesque came back Friday night. Mr. Levesque, who for many people personifies the Quebec independence movement, appeared before about 2,000 members of the Parti Quebecois to ask them to re-elect him as party leader for another one-year term.

The delegates and observers at the PQ's third annual convention answered with an emotional demonstration of support and affection that left little doubt he will continue to lead the party he founded three years ago.

For several months after the Quebec general elections last April 29, Mr. Levesque was contemplating stepping down as leader.

The PQ received 23 per cent of the total vote in the election, second only to Premier Robert Bourassa's Liberals who got 45 per cent of the votes cast, but Mr. Levesque questioned his further usefulness as leader.

WINS APPLAUSE

The October terrorism crisis and the threat it presented to the PQ as a party dedicated to achieving Quebec independence through democratic means, persuaded him to stay on.

The delegates who had crowded into the Patro-Roe Amador recreation centre in Quebec, boiling under the lights of a television crew, broke into applause when he said quietly:

"It's up to you to decide whether I was wrong or right."

Mr. Levesque told his listeners to have "persistence" in continuing to work toward Quebec independence through democratic non-violent means. He denounced those who advocate violent revolution to bring about Quebec independence and their sympathizers and vowed that the PQ would never become a "cover" for them.

Instead, he asked party members to work for "a revolution in the real sense" in Quebec society by changing the political and economic system through electoral means.

He told them to ignore "attempts at provocation and exploitation" by persons attempting to subvert or discredit the party and called for continued respect of "the civilized rules of democracy."

He said the party must continue to work among Quebecers "starting with those among us who suffer the most, not in words, but in reality," and must not become a "political laboratory" for abstract theory.

After Mr. Levesque's speech, which was interrupted eight times and ran 10 minutes beyond the 30-minute time limit set for the two leadership candidates' speeches, the audience rose and chanted "Le Quebec aux Quebecois—Quebec for Quebecers," stamping their feet and clapping their hands. The slogan soon changed to "on veut Levesque—we want Levesque."

HEARING AID BILL UNVEILED

A bill providing for regulation of the hearing aid business by a government-appointed board was introduced in the legislature Friday by Minister Without Portfolio Isabel Dawson.

The bill, similar to one which the government allowed to die on the order paper last year, will enable licensing of hearing aid dealers and consultants by a board to include at least two specialists in hearing.

Unlicensed dealers will face fines of up to $500 for a first offence and up to $1,000 or 30 days' imprisonment for subsequent offences.

The board will have power of suspension over dealers found guilty of misconduct or incompetence. Appeals will be allowed to a judge of the Supreme Court.

Loan Period
Extended

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell announced Friday the federal government has agreed to extend the repayment period for its special municipal projects loan fund from 15 to 20 years.

In view of the easier terms as well as a drop in the interest rate for the money, Campbell said he was advising municipalities to "get on their horses" and reconsider whether they wish to apply for some of the money.

About $11 million is left unallocated out of the $37 million which was made available by the federal government in its December min-budget.

Campbell said the money, which started out at close to eight per cent, is available at below seven per cent because of subsequent interest rate reductions.

Bennett Accused Of Disrespect

Premier Bennett was accused Friday of "high disrespect" for the rights of MLAs and of abusing and deceiving the legislature.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) told the legislature that Bennett had deliberately misled the house by holding back written answers to questions on the order paper until Wednesday, the day after his spending estimates were approved by the house.

POINT OF PRIVILEGE

Macdonald, speaking on a point of privilege, asked Speaker William Murray to "expunge" from the legislative record the house's approval of a $2 million transit subsidy to B.C. Hydro.

The MLA said he was personally withdrawing false information which he had given the legislature during the debate on the vote. He said he had incorrectly stated Hydro's transit deficit would be higher this year than last year.

The answers to questions filed by Bennett the day after the debate showed Hydro's deficit would actually be lower, Macdonald said, accusing Bennett of deliberately withholding the information.

"CAN'T BLAME ME"

Bennett rose to say that Macdonald should have known that with an increase in transit fares last year, the deficit would be lower.

"The premier and minister of finance can't be blamed for the member's lack of knowledge about what happened," Bennett said.

Speaker Murray had Macdonald withdraw the words "deceived" and "deliberately misled" and took his question of privilege under study.

During the debate on his estimates Monday and Tuesday, Bennett was asked more than once if he would withdraw his vote until he had answered a large number of written questions about B.C. Hydro financing and the transit service.

Bennett filed answers to 26 questions at the close of Wednesday's sitting.

Major Park Work Outlined

half the population of B.C. lives there.

The parks branch's Langford workshop has been asked to double its output of picnic tables by April 1, Kiernan said, and 20 new workers will be taken on there.

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan Malahat), joining other MLAs in making pleas logging the trees there and the money had wound up in the Dominican Republic.

"I hope the funds will be used to develop parks down there," he said, thanking the government for following his advice about developing Cypress Bowl publicly, after six years of controversy.

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) warned Kiernan not to follow any existing recreational designs for Cypress Bowl.

The former promoters, he said, designed their plans with an eye to logging as much of the park as possible. Williams said three times as much area had been devoted to ski trails as necessary and almost three times as much space had been planned for parking.

William Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet) said the government ought to increase the acreage in the Skagit Valley devoted to parks.

Recent publicity has sent many people flocking to see the valley and a need exists for toilets, parking and campsites, Hartley said.

Howard McDiarmid (SC—Alberni) said the government should take between $3 and $5 million from the fund and make it available on a cost-sharing basis to regional districts wishing to develop parks.

He also proposed that three or four geology students be hired to conduct guided tours of Euclataw Cave near Port Alberni. With a little publicity, McDiarmid said, people would come to the cave to enjoy its beauty.

Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds), as did Education Minister Donald Brothers, asked that young people who really need jobs benefit from the parks program.

All the jobs should not go to university students, Dowding said. Because so many of B.C.'s parks need toilet facilities, he said, the government should build portable privies in trailers which can be hooked into water and sewer systems built to the parks.

This would prevent vandalism because the units would be in use only when the park is open and attended. After a seemingly endless round of speakers made special pleas for expenditure for specific projects, said Vancouver Island is growing at a rate five times faster than the rest of the province and should get special consideration under the program.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett called for development of Cypress Bowl and Seymour Park.

Barrett said the former private developers of Cypress Bowl had made $250,000 from

The first phase of Cypress Bowl development would be done, with skiing in the winter of 1972-73 as a target date.

The road to Mount Seymour will be rebuilt and a trail will be established; Manning Park and Alouette Lake will be substantially expanded. Kiernan didn't detail the campsite expansion work around the province but said it would be apportioned fairly.

He said the Fraser Valley was entitled to a major share of the funds because about Seven pupils in Greater Victoria schools are among a group of 20 who placed in a province-wide outdoors anti-litter poster contest.

The contest was sponsored by Outdoors Unlittered (B.C.) and Litter Patrols of British Columbia.

Victoria winners: Judy Marston, 851 Monterey Ave., second; Dargy d' Estrube, 1542 Athlone Drive, third; Bruce Forsberg, 3771 Winston Crescent, seventh; Dennis Nanos, 33 Cook Street, 12th; Margaret English, 774 Sayward Road, 17th, and Greg Pynn, 3427 Quadra, 18th.

DOLPHIN BEACH ESTATES

WATERFRONT

Sit on the sundeck and gaze forever across the sparkling Straits of Georgia to the mountains. Listen to the waves as they caress the rocks just a few feet away, giving you a rare sense of peace and tranquility. The exterior of the home, in native red cedar, blends with the rugged unspoiled coastline. Dust free hot water heating and a native stone fireplace provide both comfort and beauty. The 3 bedrooms look out upon rocky hills thickly treed with arbutus, oak and evergreens. The knotty pine all electric kitchen overlooks the 100 feet of seafrontage. Priced at only $32,900.

SEAVIEW LOTS

$5,950 with 10% Down.

LAKEFRONT

Once in a while a realtor is privileged to present a luxury estate of superb quality AND taste. We have been so privileged with a 1.3 acre estate on Sproat Lake, 10 miles from Alberni with nearly 200 feet of lakefront. A small bay provides excellent moorage for a boat or a float plane.

The setting is superb, as the grounds have been meticulously designed to take advantage of the natural contours and native vegetation. The house itself was designed to very exacting specifications and has had the benefit of superior materials (mostly export grade). Everything in the house is genuine and far removed from the "plastic" finish so frequently portrayed as taste. The accommodation consists of 3 bedrooms, 3 bathrooms, family room, a 17x12 dining room and a 17x20 living room. Priced at $65,000, it is well below replacement cost. For more information call Mr. Don Fraser or drive to the Dolphin Beach Field Office—see coloured slides and arrange for a private viewing.

Tax Tips

Usual Cries of Anguish From Public

During the next few weeks, as Canadians perform the annual ritual of filling out their income tax forms, there will be more than the usual cries of anguish. For some, taxes will go up (Manitoba increased both its corporate and individual tax rates this year) and for all, there's the special 3 per cent surtax, which will continue throughout this year.

On top, individual real income will be down for many, because of unemployment in the latter half of the year, and because everything costs more due to inflation in the earlier part of the year.

There's little relief in sight, particularly when one analyzes the report on the National Finances published this time each year by the Canadian Tax Foundation. With the federal government's estimates for 1971 spending starting to come in, and as each of the 10 provinces presents its budget in the next two months, a rather gloomy tax future seems certain.

The real question being asked with growing frequency by taxpayers at all levels is: when is enough enough. The more sophisticated are beginning to wonder aloud as to where we are going, and why. Whether it is this year, next year or five years from now, a moment of truth is coming, a time when the public may well demand a major change in the role it will permit and expect the government to play in the lives of its citizens.

DEMAND BY PUBLIC

The growth of all government spending, particularly at the provincial and municipal levels, presumably in response to the public's demand for public services, indicates that unless the trend is reversed, or at least arrested, there will eventually come a day when government may very well totally control and manage the nation's economy. Put another way, freedom of individual economic movement and choice might disappear.

Consider the indicators. This year all governments will take about $30 billion in revenues, up considerably from the $11 billion they took only a decade ago. Government spending is growing at a much faster rate than the economy. In 1960, governments took about 27 per cent of the gross national product — this year the take may be around 38 per cent.

If one puts all the data into a computer to establish the trend, George Orwell's prediction that 1984 will be the year, seems alarmingly appropriate.

The trend to a government-run economy appears more sharply in the number of government employees. In 1960 the federal government had about 150,000 employees on its payroll, but by 1970 this had climbed by 100,000 to 250,000. The provincial governments have another 350,000 on staff. In the provinces, the number of government employees varies considerably from province to province.

DISTURBING QUESTION

For instance in Ontario, 15 out of every 1000 population work for the provincial government, while in Manitoba government employees (not taking into account the 500 estimated to be hired if the government's state-owned auto insurance plan goes into effect) are now 23 government workers for every 1000 of population.

Cunard

The Cunard Steamship Co. has declared a loss of $4.74 million in its preliminary report for 1970.

Part of the reason for the 1970 loss, compared with the previous year's profit of $7.25 million, is a new accounting method which takes in proportional losses of consortium activities such as container ships which Cunard has a minority interest.

Passenger traffic, most of it originating in North America, now accounts for less than one-third of Cunard's gross revenue, and in 1970 lost $1.25 million vs. a 1969 profit of $2 million.

St. Mary's Mines

Shareholders of St. Mary's Mines Ltd. have approved resolutions permitting the company to diversify its interests outside the natural resources industry.

The company has re-organized — subject to approval regulatory authorities — changed its name to Can-Base Industries Ltd. and is proceeding with plans to make certain acquisitions in the entertainment industry, including Herschorn Productions Ltd., financing in the amount of $107,500.

These funds will allow Herschorn to purchase premises in Vancouver, which contain a recording studio, and also purchase a 16-track recorder.

Pacific Western

Pacific Western Airlines reports a net loss of $232,000 on earnings of $43.5 million for the year ended Dec. 31, 1970.

This compared with a net profit of $384,000 on earnings of $33.9 million in 1969. Labor unrest, a sluggish economy, delay in integrating B.C. Airlines into PWA's schedules and a downturn in northern oil exploration contributed to the loss, the report said.

During the year, PWA acquired Byers Transport Ltd. and bought B.C. Airlines for $1.1 million. An injunction granted employees of B.C. Airlines held up for three months its integration with PWA.

A Critical View Of the Israelis

By TORCHY ANDERSON

The seat of judgment can be a hot seat.

Dr. A. C. Forrest has been editor of The United Church Observer, has done considerable writing about the Middle East and has attracted attacks by Zionists. He takes time out to reply and explain.

He visited the time-bomb we know as the Middle East in 1968, 1969 and 1970. He finds the dominant Zionist faction in Israel racist — comparable to South Africa. He admits there are hawks on the Arab side but, on the whole, the book is a condemnation of Jewish aggression and a plea for help to better conditions among thousands of displaced Arabs.

Dr. Forrest admits that Jewish minorities in such places as Egypt and Syria have been persecuted. But he thinks the Jews control far more effective propaganda than do their enemies. In one chapter, he sees some glimmer of hope for a peaceful side-by-side existence of Jew and Arab. At other times his tone is hopeless.

His own church and Canadians in general do not emerge unmarked from these pages. In his own and other churches he finds ignorance and prejudice and is ashamed of cast-off clothing Christians send the relief camps.

Mitchell Sharp, Canada's Minister of External Affairs, gets in the way of Dr. Forrest's scatter gun. The author says flatly Sharp is over-cautious on Middle East issues because his riding is 52 per cent Jewish.

History comes another full cycle when the author writes: "I do not like to refer in any way to Israeli treatment of the Arabs as 'Nazi' but the parallels are so numerous — Israelis have relied upon a systematic destruction of homes and villages to suppress resistance."

In the concluding chapter of his book Dr. Forrest writes: "I see no hope whatsoever in the present Israeli regime. Many more expert than I share the same cynicism regarding Mrs. Meir and those around her. Most Zionists abroad seem even more hawkish than she."

"The latest propaganda is that Israel is the West's bulwark against communism. Arabs point out that the policy of supporting Israeli expansion is pushing the whole Arab world into the Communist camp."

"But there is some hope in young Israelis and young Arabs, many of whom share the same view, that the Palestinians have been wronged, and that the great hope of the future is for Israel to acknowledge the wrong and correct it."

And when you pass the Doctor's last exclamation mark you can still hear the tick of that time-bomb.

'The Ultimate Test'

Frustration That Became Violence

By STEVE HUME

society, and what it is becoming.

"It is self-defeating to study violence as if it were obscene, nor does recognition of its relevance condone or encourage it," Nieburg says.

"Like many things, violence is deeply ambiguous in all its aspects, containing both functional and dysfunctional tendencies, capable of both positive and negative outcomes."

"In a sense, it is the ultimate test of viability of values and customary behavior."

He argues that political extremism, whether for or against the status quo, is an indication that pressure is building against the chain of late the economy" or "to slow the inflationary spiral."

These are generalized examples but both have one thing in common — they are not connected to the human results of their decisions.

The post-war industrial state saw a tremendous mushrooming of bureaucracy — immense increases in governmental and corporate structures.

But the decade of the Sixties also brought increasing frustration with the time-consuming and apparently fruitless game of proper channels.

The campuses, populated by the most educated and affluent generation ever, flared into turmoil as frustration with bureaucratic procedures and the paternalism implicit in such structures turned to anger and finally rage.

And it is not surprising that the 1960's brought a sharp increase of political violence into the social climate of North America and Europe.

Violence is one of the most efficient and effective ways of cutting through bureaucratic baffle and getting to the gut issues of problems and disputes.

The concept of political violence is abhorrent within a society which has carefully nurtured the principles and values of democracy — rule by the people; the people we.

H. L. Nieburg, in his book Political Violence, argues that too often in the past this abhorrence of violence has led to a colored and adulterated evaluation of its social implications.

It is time, he says, to take a cool, objective look at what political violence is in our

The Dirty Joke as Morality Play

By PETER SYPNOWICH

A graduate student who has been living in the States comes back to Edmonton and the airport customs man puts him into a room with a beautiful blonde and orders them both to undress for a search.

The blonde strips down, removing sweater, blouse, skirt. The student is staring. The brassiere comes off — and the blonde is revealed as a young male.

The customs man picks up the brassiere, which turns out to be filled with marijuana. He'd known all along the blonde was male, because he'd spotted him going into a men's washroom...

Well, Robert Kroetsch tells it better than that in Say

CREATION, edited by Robert Kroetsch. New Press. $8.50 cloth, $2.50 paper.

Ah, a bawdy excerpt from his forthcoming novel, that appears in a new book called Creation.

The excerpt is one of 12 selections of prose and verse by Kroetsch and two fellow novelists, James Bacque and Pierre Gravel, plus interviews with the three authors.

In these selections Kroetsch's work is the most interesting, partly because he won a Governor-General's Award for his last novel, The Studhorse Man, but mostly because he employs what seems to be a burgeoning phenomenon in Canadian literature: The dirty joke.

The dirty joke is not to be laughed at. That is, it might be funny ha-ha but it is also funny strange. As novelist Margaret Laurence says in her interview with Kroetsch, comedy now is extremely serious — "It's almost the only way in which you can be serious enough."

Mrs. Laurence makes no mention of the earthiness of Kroetsch's humor, but his novel The Studhorse Man is (at one level) simply a bawdy tall tale. In a memorable scene the protagonist, having loosed a herd of horses down Jasper Ave. in Edmonton, goes into Woodward's department store and asks the girl at the perfume counter if she's seen a big blue stallion.

"Only a pair of grays," she says, pointing to a floor-walker sweeping up the droppings with a feather duster. "They went toward lingerie."

Kroetsch is not the only one doing this. There's novelist Mordecai Richler, whose writing has suddenly become downright ribald. Or Farley Mowat, last year's winner of the Leacock Humor Award — in contrast to most Leacock winners, who have been very genteel, Farley Mowat is very bawdy. He is also very popular — and very Canadian.

Canadians are not really licentious, but then neither is the dirty joke. Like profanity, the dirty joke is rooted in deference.

Thus there is an essential modesty to Richler's long toilet story in the recently published excerpt from his forthcoming novel, St. Urbain's Horseman; the story has been compared to Philip Roth's hilarious business about onanism in Portnoy's Complaint, but the American's humor is liberating — and every Canadian knows that after liberation comes decadence.

In Richler's last novel, Cocksure, there is a parody of the Hollywood sex sequence that shows Before and After but not the act itself — by now, of course, Hollywood is showing us that, too. Cocksure is much more Canadian (and much more funny) in its derisive parody of sexual permissiveness at a progressive private school.

In Creation, Robert Kroetsch has a funny little "anti-

TV play for the Canadian imagination," called The Man in the Winter Catalogue.

It's about a man who used to model long underwear, and while it mocks sensual repression among Canadians it ends with a sort of glum acceptance of sexual hypocrisy. Kroetsch is trying to get down to basics in the Canadian character — "We haven't got an identity until someone tells our story," he says to Margaret Laurence — and one of the basic things he sees in Canadians is a knowledge that there are always limits.

In Say Ah the graduate student is outraged when the customs men find smuggled watches and souvenirs on the persons of respectable, God-fearing Alberta matrons.

He is able to feel indignant even though the only reason no marijuana was found on him is that his wife confiscated it while he was packing. "There are trips and there are trips," his wife told him firmly.

Margaret Laurence remarks to Kroetsch that she finds his style very contemporary, with a profound sense of irony, a kind of self-mocking humor. "Yes," Kroetsch replies. "And I am fascinated by the Canadian need to be morally superior and to put oneself down at the same time."

Morality and self-mockery. For these the dirty joke is a perfect vehicle.

good. But what is "a novel" nowadays?

The author seems to think scientific jargon is an international passport and makes no allowance for the differences in language among the world's scientists. In addition, the characters are hardly sketched in at all. They are simply clue-finders bent on solving a puzzle.

But this lack of characterization is what makes the book so typical of the 1960s and 70s. It's a technological paradise explained in easy layman's terms. The reader is bombarded with facts. Facts about computers; facts about black Norway rats (they're neither black nor Norwegian); whole sections of "secret files" verbatim. At the outset there is even a dictionary definition of a crisis.

So the tension of the book depends little upon what people think and how they relate to each other. Its excitement comes from what people do.

For pages at a time we're shown how the four scientists go through a long and arduous process of sterilizing their bodies as they descend through the five levels of their operations centre. It is those details that convince us of the reality of these people.

Just as the Victorian popular novel was fascinated with money and the things it could buy, so the fiction of our technological society is fascinated with how things work. This is true of even the simplest books, like Arthur Hailey's Airport and Hotel.

But the perfect analogy is television. The Andromeda Strain is the written equivalent of a program like Mission Impossible. Conversation is kept to a minimum. Instead we follow a complicated technical operation as it builds stage by stage to a suspenseful climax.

And what a cliff-hanger this book is!

Lives of Ordinary People Illuminate Irish Paradox

By BEATRICE CARROLL

home of Arthur and Edith Magee.

Good, gentle Arthur, proud of his grocery shop, loves Josie; Edith, his smug, humorless wife, a devoted follower of Mary Baker Eddy, does her duty as she sees it, and Faith, their daughter who is the same age as Josie, suffers the intrusion.

With the years the circle widens; Arthur finds the only warmth he knows in the clandestine company of Tilly Skelly, Josie's easy-going, generous aunt, and later Faith finds excitement in the arms of Billy Skelly, Josie's brother, a shipyard worker.

Time goes on, but the attitudes remain the same: Is this the answer to the Irish question? Edith's belief in Christian Science has separated Arthur from his Presbyterian family, particularly brother George, a most unattractive character, who is "proud to be an Ulsterman, a Protestant and an Orangeman," and who regards Christian Science as the next step to Romanism.

The splinter sects of the Protestant faith are united only in their fear of the Pope and the power of his Church. Only in the faded grandeur of Lennox Court, the home of Edith's childhood friend, Sylvia Lennox and her artistic, homosexual son Roland, does Catholicism have a niche in the person of Mrs. Quirk the housekeeper, who is engaged not only in the veneration of "saints and such-like," but in the more aggressive activities of the I.R.A.

No one doubts the side the Lord takes in all this Irish brew... it is a personal matter. Although at one point Josie says "The Orange Order encourages people to feed off the past. Imagine still finding glory in a battle won in 1690!" for everyone else King Billy, of "glorious, pious and immortal memory," still rides his white horse, NO SURRENDER is chalked on the walls, and the Glorious Twelfth is celebrated with the fives and the drums.

The lives of these ordinary people are completely fascinating, thanks to the skill of the novelist, and the human situations of happiness and love, disappointment and death are handled with reality and truth.

The dramas may be small but they are real. The bizarre — to us — aspect is in the religious positions, a reminder that the greatest vicissitudes of things amongst men is the vicissitudes of sects and religions. Little Miss Devlin and Reverend Paisley might note, decrepit alcoholic. But what was the link "between the shrivelled old man vomiting blood and the pink young child, howling and screaming?"

Why these two have remained alive is the question that haunts a four-man team of scientists and surgeons. From the moment when the Wildfire Alert is sent clattering across the Telex lines until the breathtaking final chapter (the "epilogue" is a bit of a dull thud) one's attention is rivetted to the details of the story.

It's a comic cliché of book reviews, but in this case it's true: the book is impossible to put down.

For one thing, the central idea is so plain and, because of that, so devastatingly likely. Since the progress of life on earth has seen the development of simple forms into complex ones, and since simple organisms are billions of times more numerous than complex ones, the invaders from outer space (if any) will logically be bacteria, not men.

Consequently it does not seem a gimmick to preface the book with the warning, "This file is classified top secret, etc." The story is told as though it had indeed happened.

And that's not so incredible when one remembers the elaborate quarantining of today's astronauts. The line between fact and fiction begins to disappear.

Purists may argue that as a novel this book is not all that

Voice of Reason Hard to Hear

By PETER MURRAY

As the years slip by toward 1984 the reputation of George Orwell grows apace.

The renewed interest in this tough-minded, independent author is more solidly based on the full range of his writings, and is not the faddish adulation that followed publication and widespread misinterpretation of his last novel that warned of terrible days to come, now just 13 years away.

Or are they here already? The "newspeak" and "doublethink" that passes for communication in Washington these days when the subject is Vietnam, and that surfaced in Ottawa in those strange days last fall, may be more than signs along the way.

THE CRYSTAL SPIRIT: A Study of George Orwell, by George Woodcock. Penguin. $1.65.

THE COLLECTED ESSAYS, JOURNALISM AND LETTERS OF GEORGE ORWELL. Four volumes. Penguin. $2.15 each.

In any case, it is clear that Orwell's indomitable political integrity, his refusal to be swayed to the extremes of either right or left, has a clear message for today.

Consider this observation from one of Orwell's earliest stories, Shooting an Elephant, based on his brief stay as a colonial officer in Burma:

"It was at this moment, as I stood there with the rifle in my hands, that I first grasped the hollowness, the futility of the white man's dominion in the East."

"Here was I, the white man with his gun, standing in front of the unarmed native crowd — seemingly the leading actor of the piece; but in reality I was only an absurd puppet pushed to and fro by the will of those yellow faces behind. I perceived at this moment that when the white man turns tyrant it is his own freedom that he destroys."

It's doubtful that Orwell has a place in the White House library.

Or this: "The central thing one must come to terms with is the argument, always advanced by those advocating repressive legislation, that 'you cannot allow democracy to be used to overthrow democracy — you cannot allow freedom to those who merely use it in order to destroy freedom.'"

"But if you carry this to its conclusions, there can be no case for allowing any political or intellectual freedom whatever. Evidently therefore it is a matter of distinguishing between a real and a merely theoretical threat to democracy, and no one should be persecuted for expressing his opinions, however antisocial, and no political organization suppressed, unless it can be shown that there is a substantial threat to the stability of the state."

How much weaponry did the great War Measures Act roundup find? Just 33 small firearms and 21 other assorted weapons, wasn't it?

The second quotation is from a letter written by Orwell to his friend and colleague George Woodcock, who has done as much as any man to bring about a clearer understanding of his work.

Woodcock, who makes his home in Vancouver and is a frequent contributor of reviews to this page, wrote The Crystal Spirit, a critical study of Orwell's writings and a reminiscence of the man that is generally regarded as the best of a number of books that have been written on the subject. (Orwell in his will requested that no full biography of him be undertaken.)

The Crystal Spirit won a Governor-General's Award in 1968 and now has been reissued by Penguin, along with the four volumes of The Collected Essays, Journalism and Letters of George Orwell which was first published in 1968.

Together they form a low-priced, but rich storehouse of Orwelliana. Woodcock especially will whet the appetite of anyone who has not read more of Orwell than Nineteen Eighty-Four. He calls Animal Farm Orwell's best book, but his favorite is Homage to Catalonia, about Orwell's experiences in the Spanish Civil War, because of its brilliant reportage of an era that meant so much to their generation.

The four-volume collection of Orwell's occasional writing is best read casually. The quality and level of interest is naturally uneven, but the best pieces give new insights into a man who grasped as well as anyone in this century the dangers that lie in the fanatic and futile quest for a technological utopia of the right or totalitarian utopia of the Marxist left.

Orwell clung to the ideals of a democratic socialism ameliorated by anarchism, and a waning hope for a better, gentler future that seems more remote than ever in these turbulent days.

The crushing German air raid of April 15, 1941, which destroyed and burned a great part of Belfast was that agency which thrust orphaned nine-year-old Josie Skelly, a child of the slums, into the middle-class, respectable

That man of many musical forms, Paul Horn, will swing into the McPherson Playhouse Sunday night with his Los Angeles based quintet.

Horn's return engagement here follows a week long date at Vancouver's Gassy Jack's where the quintet blew to enthusiastic reviews and leader Horn videotaped a television film.

Other members of the quintet include Art Johnson, guitar; Dave Parlato, bass; Bart Hall, percussion; and Lynn Blessing, vibraphone. Horn, a flautist who is composer, innovator, and performer, came to Victoria last year to live after 14 years in Los Angeles where he worked as studio musician and jazz artist.

He has won jazz polls in Down Beat and Playboy magazines, and worked with top jazzmen and singers including Miles Davis, Duke Ellington, Frank Sinatra, Tony Bennett, and the late Nat King Cole.

Horn's style is a unique blend of classical, jazz, and popular elements, and has been influenced by contemporary innovations, Indian raga, and Gershwin.

The performance begins at 8 p.m.

Marathon Rehearsal To Raise School Fund

The string orchestra of Oak Bay junior and senior high schools has come up with a fund-raising scheme both original and merciful.

It's a variation on the walkathon and works this way:

Conductor Bernard Rain and orchestra will hold a special rehearsal Monday evening, March 8, in the junior high school auditorium.

They'll try to survive up to four hours of non-stop practice. The only pauses to be allowed will be to turn music pages or where there is a legitimate rest for a player in the music.

Conductor and orchestra members will be sponsored by friends and relatives at a cent or more per minute or hour. Rain already has pledged totalling $18.

The "practice-thon" will start at 6:30 p.m. and will be open to the public. That's where the mercy comes in. Sponsors don't have to be in attendance.

Orchestra and parents are in the midst of raising $3,000 to pay for several projects. One is a visit to Calgary in May. Then there is a Centennial concert next month and the commissioning of an original composition from Derek Healey, Uvic professor of music.

Anyone wanting to sponsor an orchestra member in the practice-thon is asked to leave name and phone number at 592-1205 or 383-2572 or at Oak Bay junior secondary school.

Bastion Prepares for Spring

Bastion Theatre is busy again, this time with a series of children's productions and a new presentation for the McPherson Playhouse.

Judy Radu, who has appeared with Bastion as actress, costume designer and teacher, is now director for the first time of The Shoemaker and the Elves, a children's musical by Carolyn Schneider.

The musical, to open March 20 at the Newcombe Auditorium, will begin a series of five Saturday matinees.

Miss Radu, who is from Vancouver, was recently seen in a cameo role in Summer and Smoke, Bastion's last production, and was in Star Spangled Girl.

Marriage of murder? that is the question when Bastion presents We Must Kill Toni, opening March 12 at the McPherson.

This is a light murder mystery - cum-comedy which should be entertaining enough to take the chill off the coming March days. Lead players are Stuart Kent, John Heath, Jack Droy as the ever-present and ever-knowing butler, Phyllis Gaskill as a lady reporter, and Wendy Packard as Toni.

Bastion's school presentations this spring will be an adaptation of Skin of our Teeth for secondary students, and Marge Adelberg's musical and Hansel and Gretel for the elementary schools. These plays will tour Victoria and Vancouver.

$450 Paid For $3 Teddy Bear

By GENE HANDSAKER
HOLLYWOOD (AP) - Shirley Temple's teddy bear brought $450, Marilyn Monroe's bed $350 and Paul Newman's Butch Cassidy bicycle $3,100 at an auction of movie props.

The oval, chaise-style bed provocatively perched on by the late Miss Monroe in Let's Make Love, went Friday night to a New York dealer's agent who declined to be identified. An agent for Universal Studios bought the wheeled teddy bear, pulled on a string by toddler Temple in Captain January in 1936.

Twentieth Century-Fox had bought it from a toy department store for $3. The bidder, Arthur Trudeau, said the fuzzy teddy will become part of a hitherto unannounced $1 million Hollywood museum opening next Thursday as a new attraction on the Universal Studio tour.

About 700 persons attended Friday night's session, when sales totalled $67,375.

The Virtue of Patience

Looking at Art

... With Gordon Rice

It might take a while before you become aware of one of the most important qualities of Anne Bushnell's water-colors of flowers; that is, patience, a virtue which many artists today ignore, under-value, or forget.

Because of this patience, however, you can see that in her painting of "Bougainvillea" she has been able to draw out of this plant a certain very graceful and unusual posture — something like the highly studied gestures of Balinese dancers, a fluid combination of curves and angles.

Anne Bushnell doesn't appear to place much value on that stress on one's own personal, unique, definable style. She tries to find the flower, as if the whole satisfaction lay there, and personality were not an issue. For this reason I think many may pass her work by, unaccustomed as we are to such an attitude in modern painting.

There are no shortcuts in this work. She follows wherever the experience of seeing leads. I believe this method can produce certain frustrations along the way, but in the main it leads to a very calm and clear kind of mind, if pursued conscientiously, alertly.

Her smaller studies, like the "Shell with Barnacles," are exquisite. There is a faded, shimmery, rainbow-velvet tonality to this latter study of barnacles; something magical. Two little paintings of lichen (some three inches wide) are astonishing.

The scraperboard work (white lines cut into black paperboard) is very delicate, obviously demanding the utmost care in execution. Tiny pictures of single feathers! These things are so quiet (and the matting of them so plain) that they seem, hanging there, to exist solely for themselves. (March 7 is the final date for this show at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.)

Then, over in the new wing, you find Denis Bowen's show of Black Light Paintings. Using ultraviolet (or "black") light, and strobe light flickers, Bowen is going after an immediate optical-energy charge, and seems to do so in a very logical, even pleasant way.

As usual (groan!) the lights and music aren't always working. An electrician needs to be there now and then, to keep music, light, and image in "sync," but it seems these are the primitive stages of light and kinetic art, and invariably shows utilizing light, sound and motion are full of "bugs." The nice thing about Bowen's pictures however is that if you see them in plain daylight, fluorescent or incandescent light, they have considerable charm.

His little pictures employ lots of spray paint and blency brushwork, set off against sharp triangles, diamonds, circles, etc. A light, easygoing touch, yet combining attention and care, makes way for a charm something like that one sees in Mexican toys and furniture.

Simple colors (lots of orange and green) seem to stand on their own like flags, auras, insignia... now when the ultraviolet light is switched on, these colors glow with a really touching simplicity.

With the strobe working, things get spacier. Blobs of gold and silver light come pulsating out from the green and orange structures, and the pictures take on their full weight. Bowen's right in suggesting this kind of painting might be combined with dancing, lightshow, music, to achieve its full potential. Just the experience however of seeing what he's come up with working on his own is refreshing, and sets your mental cogs whirling and buzzing.

Denis Bowen, by the way, is one of the many teachers at Uvic who won't be asked back next year. The last day for his show will be March 14.

***
And the other day we discovered Ashnola, the beautiful old Victorian building which was the entrance of Gorge Road Hospital and finally got clobbered by the wrecking crews. The esthetic sense in too many of us is deadlier than doormats; being numb, these kind of amputations don't seem to faze us. Then again, a powerful poetic sensitivity is growing in North American culture, especially among the young... look out!

Rival Group Challenges Hope's Army Camp Tours

By LACEY FOSBURGH

NEW YORK — Jane Fonda, Mike Nichols, Donald Sutherland and Elliot Gould are among a dozen well-known entertainers who have formed a new comedy troupe in the hopes of touring military bases across the United States with an anti-war stage show for "the forgotten soldiers."

In revealing their plans, members of the troupe said they intended to test the U.S. army's new liberalization policies and to challenge comedian Bob Hope's "corner on the market" of shows for servicemen.

"It's been very disconcerting for many of us in Hollywood," Miss Fonda told a news conference, "to see that Bob Hope, Martha Raye and other companies of their political ilk have cornered the market and are the only entertainers allowed to speak to soldiers in this country and Vietnam."

"A lot of us who have different points of view about the war and what's happening to this country have decided the time has come to speak to the forgotten soldiers."

"They are the majority of the soldiers," she continued. "They want peace and freedom, but they are isolated in the military world and they need our support."

The troupe, like other entertainment groups, would require official invitations from commanding officers in order to perform on military bases. Members of the troupe include the writer-comedians Jules Feiffer, Dick Gregory and Herb Gardner, actor Peter Boyle, folksinger Barbara Dane and the rock group, Swamp Dogg.

Dr. Howard B. Levy, who was dismissed as an army captain and sentenced to 26 months in prison in June, 1967, for refusing to train soldiers headed for Vietnam, also appeared at the news conference. He said that Lt. Gen. John J. Tolson, commander of Fort Bragg, North Carolina, was now "studying our script."

"If General Tolson is really serious about the army's so-called liberalization policy," Levy said, "and believes in the army's 'new mod look,' he'll let our show on the base."

BOB HOPE

JANE FONDA

If not, he will ban it, and let the public know it's the same, old-fashioned repressive army."

Fort Bragg was chosen as the first target, Levy explained, "because Tolson has been the key architect of the army's new look. We expect his full co-operation."

If they are invited to perform, he said, the army would automatically pay their room, board and transportation expenses as part of its standard policy toward civilian entertainers.

Working under the auspices of the United States Servicemen's Fund which was established in 1967 to encourage the anti-war movement within military ranks, the troupe had already arranged "contingency plans" to perform their skits in the Haymarket, Square Coffeehouse in Fayetteville, outside Fort Bragg, on March 13 and 14.

"The point of all this," said Miss Fonda, who has been active for several years in the anti-war movement, "is to show soldiers there are those of us who understand."

HEART-BREAKING WINDUP

FOR VICTORIA SENIORS

Wendell Popular Winner

HALIFAX — Sincerity of the congratulations rang 99.9 per cent pure after Dr. Wendell MacDonald skipped his Prince Edward Island rink to the Canadian seniors' curling championship Friday.

But the highest ratio of condolences went out to the Gordon Moore-skipped rink from Victoria, who knocked hard on the title door but were denied because of a pair of heart-breaking, last-end defeats.

For MacDonald, it was the achievement of a goal he had sought for seven years.

The 63-year-old Charlottetown radiologist hit the target when he sent his last rock through a port of less than two feet and in for a shot that provided a 10-9 victory over Burley Townsends' Saskatchewan rink in Friday's sudden-death playoff.

It has to rate as one of the most popular wins ever recorded. MacDonald is "Mr. Popularity" in senior ranks. He's liked by all, and if you want to know why, then consider one of his first remarks after winning the Seagram Stone:

"I only come here for the people I meet. You can't eat trophies."

His rink with lead Dan O'Rourke, second Doug George and third John Squarebriggs finished the week with nine wins and two losses. Townsends' Regina quartet finished 8-3, including the playoff.

Moore's British Columbia champions and Quebec, skipped by Harry Coles, finished with 7-3 records.

But it was the last-day miseries experienced by the Moore rink that touched most of the spectators. The Victorians led most of the way, and were 7-1 heading into the final day.

Then disaster struck. Ontario's Gord Wallace, two down going home, made a last-rock takeout to count three and snatch away an 8-7 victory.

Still, the Moore rink had a chance. That hope increased as Northern Ontario's Rudy Steki was heading for a final-round, 11-4 victory over MacDonald.

After six ends, on the next sheet, Moore held a 7-3 lead over Manitoba's MacCrimmon.

Moore seemed almost guaranteed of a spot in the playoffs. After nine ends, the Victorians led 8-5 and only the last end had to be played.

If the tenth-round finish was a disaster, the 11th-round windup was a catastrophe. MacCrimmon counted four, won 9-8!

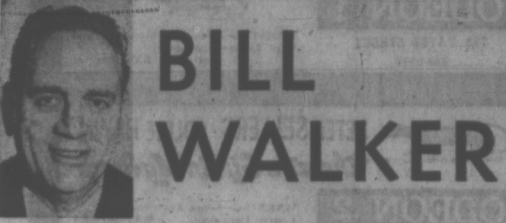

Moore's rink included third Gord Hoey, second Dick Pick and lead Jack Smith.

Friday's final-day letdown was virtually a repeat of what happened to Moore in 1969, when he finished as runner-up to Ontario's Alfie Phillips. That year, Moore led the field going into the final draw. He led 5-0 after three ends and 10-5 after six, but Ontario charged back to steal an 11-10, extra-end decision and force a playoff.

Phillips won the playoff, 7-5.

BILL WALKER

They got some of the physical jerks out of the way early, and one of them already is having a look-see with the big team. Bob Burrows and Pete Duncan, Victoria's two aspirants to baseball greatness, have left town again in pursuit of their goal.

Burrows is a catcher in his chosen profession and is in training camp with Kansas City Chiefs. Duncan is a third baseman by trade whom the Chiefs would like to turn into a pitcher. Both are Victorians, and both played with San Jose of the California League last year.

It was much earlier this spring, perhaps winter would be a better word, when Burrows and Duncan decided that if they were going to have to do push-ups at training camp, they'd better get a head start on the field. The chore would come easier that way.

And so the pair of them rented the Burnside gym, paying the dollar an hour out of their own pockets, and started lobbing the ball back and forth after the calisthenics program had been dispensed with. If they were to be in demand by their coaching staffs, they would be ready to answer the call, and be in the fittest condition, too. It would improve the relationship immediately. Besides, baseball was to be their livelihood for the next six or seven months, and if a rookie isn't ready to play when called, nobody is going to feel sorry for him or perhaps ask again. They wanted every advantage they could get.

For Burrows, it may have been simpler. After all, he had played basketball all winter and had led his team in scoring, too. The legs would be in shape, and legs are a catcher's stock in trade, if the arm isn't.

For Duncan the task would be more difficult. He had graduated from Washington State College last year as an All-American third baseman as selected by the NCAA Coaches' Association, and had signed a professional contract with San Jose through the Kansas City organization. Now, however, he was in receipt of a letter saying that the Chiefs would like him to try out as a pitcher. This was not new because Duncan had been a pitcher before in college. But it was at third base he was needed, and it was at third base he played for the WSC Cougars.

And he could throw the ball hard. Obviously the Chiefs recognized this fact, and anyone who can throw hard will always be looked at. This is a particular talent that can't be taught. Most of the rest can.

Only last week Duncan had been invited back to State to receive his 1970 college awards — a gold engraved wrist watch, a ring, and a plaque for services rendered and honors received. Now, he is in California, with another pitcher, and they are busily loosening up in preparation for training camp at Sarasota, Fla., on March 15.

Or as the advice from the Chiefs said in part: "... prepare yourself mentally and physically..."

"He's looking forward to it," said Tom Duncan, father of Pete, regarding Pete's transition from the infield to the pitching staff. The fact that the Chiefs have asked him to do the switch-about must mean they figure he's got a better future as a pitcher. Besides the new job, Pete got a raise in pay, which must be encouraging, too.

For Burrows, it is a bigger chance. The mere fact that he has become a rookie in a major league camp gives promise of better than a return to the California League. Rookies aren't shut off if they show any talent at all. To be invited, Burrows must have shown more than average ability.

Tom Duncan got to see both boys play last summer and he explained Pete's season this way:

"He got off to a good start, hit .300 for a time, and then fell into a slump. At one stage he went one for 27 and his average dropped to just over .100. Then in the last 15 games of the season, he hit .246, and finished with .245." In addition Pete hit seven home runs, a commendable feat as he was only there for the last part of the season.

Of Burrows, Duncan said: "He hit .245 for the season, and had eight home runs. He played well, and all the catchers I saw while I was down there for about three weeks. Burrows was by far the best, in my opinion. I think he should be able to click in at least Double A. That is a classification just short of competition such as the International, and Coast League, and the final stepping stone to the majors.

Certainly for the two Victoria professionals, if their ambitions are lofty indeed, so are the rewards. And Burrows and Duncan have indicated by their very own training program that they fully understand the advantages that can be theirs.

And if they are to be happy in their professions, they are in the best possible shape, too.

Lansdowne, Bays Advance to Final

Undefeated Lansdowne and Oak Bay advanced to the Victoria Inter-High Junior Boys' Basketball League final after rambling to victory in Friday's opening games of a four-team tournament.

Sparked by John MacManis' 23-point contribution, Lansdowne defeated Elizabeth Fisher 60-55 while Oak Bay downed Colquhoun 46-38.

Finalists meet tonight at 8:30 in the championship showdown at Colquhoun Junior High, but the consolation playoff between Friday's losers (starting at 7) also will hold plenty of attraction.

The top three teams advance to the Island tournament at Lansdowne March 5-6.

McManis scored six field goals and hit on 11 of 14 shots from the foul line. Kevin Worth tossed in 15 points, Vanni Barbor added 12 and Doug Mosher hit 10 for Lansdowne.

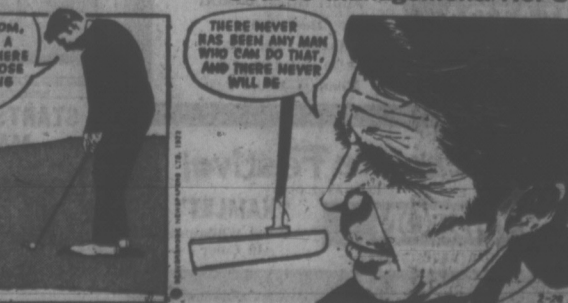

Malcolm Moscrop (18), Gary Davison (14) and Clive Haas (13) spearheaded Elizabeth Fisher's attack.

John Burrows hit for 17 Oak Bay points while Kevin Wallace added nine and Grant Boland eight. Denis Davault was Colquhoun's standout with 22 points.

Hawks' Mikita A Silent Toiler

By The Canadian Press

Names such as Tony and Phil Esposito, Bobby and Dennis Hull and Bobby Orr have been crowding that of Stan Mikita for attention in the National Hockey League but that hasn't deterred the hard-working Chicago Black Hawks centre.

Instead of pressing for goals that might remind fans he swept the Art Ross, Hart and Lady Byng trophies in 1967 and 1968, Mikita toils in the background—as he did Friday night in setting up all three Chicago goals in a 3-1 victory over California Golden Seals.

The 30-year-old veteran of 12 seasons with the Hawks has scored only 17 goals so far this season, compared to the 40, 30 and 39 he collected in his three previous campaigns, but his three assists Friday gave him a total of 42, matching the pace of most of his seasons.

His top output was 67 assists in the 1968-69 season when Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins surpassed him with a record 126 points and took the Art Ross Trophy as leading scorer and the Hart as most valuable player.

Mikita's assists in the only game played Friday all came on power plays. Dennis Hull got two of the goals, his 32nd and 33rd of the season, and the other went to Cliff Koroll.

Tommy Williams, traded earlier this week from Minnesota North Stars, scored the California goal.

The 10,620 fans at Oakland saw several fights and Mikita collected three minors in the rough contest.

Mainland's Snow Hits Shuttle Event

The snow in Vancouver Friday caused a skid by the B.C. Open badminton championship schedule at the Racquet Club of Victoria.

Because numerous out-of-town players were late in arriving, matches continued into the early hours this morning.

But the weather didn't affect the play of some of the favorites.

The top-seeded men's singles entries, Canadian champs Bruce Rollick and defending B.C. titleholder Wayne Macdonnell advanced at the expense of local players. Rollick downed Brentwood junior Gerry Mounie while Macdonnell defeated Saanichton's Ed Moniz 5-1, 15-2.

Bob McMynn of the Racquet Club was the first player to reach the quarter-finals when he defeated Richard Bourne from Richmond 15-5, 15-12.

Another Victorian who was successful was city junior champion Dave Howells, who advanced with a 15-17, 15-7, 15-8 win over Ken Crow from Seattle.

Because of the very large entry and the new and highly successful tournament format which guarantees players at least three sets in each event, play today was scheduled at the University of Victoria gymnasium and Cordova Bay Community Hall as well as the Racquet Club.

Open semi-finals will be played at the Racquet Club, starting at 7 this evening.

Doug Rides High, But Bucks Falter

Kelowna Buckaroo supporters haven't had much to cheer in this British Columbia Junior Hockey League campaign. Except Doug Manchak.

Buckaroos have won only seven of their 51 games, but coach Wayne North can't fault Manchak.

Friday, for example, Manchak figured in two of Kelowna's three goals, but it wasn't enough as Vancouver Centennials came through with an 8-3 victory at Kerrisdale.

Manchak scored his 37th goal and picked up his 25th assist. Only three players — Ted Plow of Victoria (with 50), Vancouver's Neil Murphy (with 44) and Gerry Vachon of New Westminster (with 38) have scored more goals than the Kelowna winger.

Vachon moved ahead only because he counted twice, including the game-winner, as the Royals upset Penticton

Broncos 5-4 in Friday's only other game.

Both Vachon and Manchak are bidding to become the league's third 40-goal scorer. Both get chances to do it tonight. The Royals continue their Okanagan tour by visiting Vernon while the Buckaroos move to Victoria's Memorial Arena (8:30) for a meeting with the Cougars.

Cougars' lineup will be bolstered by the return of forward defenceman Tom Keep. He missed Wednesday's 10-5 victory over New Westminster because of a date with the dentist.

Cougars also will be missing defenceman Dale Penick, who resumed skating at mid-week after missing several games because of an ankle injury.

Little Maurice L'Heureux stopped the Broncos cold when he had to, then New Westminster Royals got hot for their first victory this season over the Okanagan Division leaders.

Vachon scored two power-play goals to give the Royals a perfect start to their three-game Okanagan swing. John McCracken, Grant Williams and Jack McIlhenny added the other goals.

Key saves by L'Heureux — after he had been beaten by Fred Parent and Vic Merceri — turned the game around. Merceri and Harry Turk managed to beat him for the other Penticton goals, but Vachon's goal at 15:19 of the third period ensured the win.

At Kerrisdale, the line of Ray Todd, Pat Russell and centre Mike McCarthy collected nine points, including four goals, as Vancouver slapped Kelowna.

Todd scored three as the Centennials snapped a sluggish 1-1 tie with four goals in the second period and never looked back.

Charlie Huck and Larry Patenaude counted the others for the Buckaroos.

Curling Tips

By Ron Northcott
(Three-time World Champion)

In today's situation, it's the last end, the score is tied, and no place is in play. Where should you put your rock when the opposing skip has last-rock advantage?

THE STRATEGY: There is certainly no pat answer for this situation because no matter where you place it, you still have to get a miss from your opposition. But that is the key. Make it easier for him to miss.

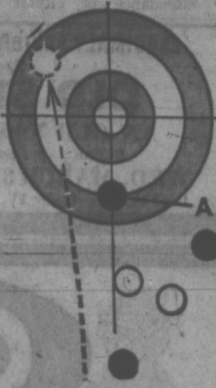

Under normal circumstances, I favor trying to place the rock just behind the tee-line, fully in the eight-foot ring, or just touching the edge of the four-foot, and just off the centre line.

Many times this will induce your opponent to play a two-way shot figuring that if he's heavy, he will have your rock for backing. Once he makes this decision, you have a great chance that he'll miss. Another reason for putting the rock behind the tee-line is that if he does play a hit, he can't afford to roll very far, or he might roll out and cause an extra end, and you may get a better chance on the extra end.

If the ice is reasonably keen, but swirly, then I would attempt to put my last rock in front of the four-foot ring and force a hit.

Also, if there is a particular spot inside the eight-foot ring that hasn't been used much, try to put your last rock there and hope for the best.

TODAY'S TIP: There is much controversy over how to play the ninth end if the score is tied.

Most competitive curlers, if they have last rock on the ninth, will try to blank the end unless the opposition misses a rock in the house and gives them an almost certain opportunity to count two.

Suppose you don't have last rock. What should you do?

You can either try to steal one or force your opponent to take one. One up without last rock is not an ideal position so I strongly favor trying to force the opposition to take one. More often than not, you will get an opportunity to score two points on the last end to win the game.

Oak Bay, the dominant Inter-High Senior Boys' Basketball League team in the '60s, still has a chance to earn an invitation to the Vancouver Island "AA" tournament in 1971.

Bays kept alive their hopes of an Island playoff berth by clipping Reynolds Roadrunners 68-46 in a league game played Friday at Oak Bay.

Victoria brought Oak Bay to within two points of Reynolds and Mt. Douglas Rams, co-holders of third place. The top four finishers in league play gain entry into the Island finale.

RAMS MOVE, TOO!

The Rams also made a gain, defeating Esquimalt Dockers 62-37 to move into the tie with Reynolds. The playoff contenders all have one game remaining.

The Island tournament will be played at University of Victoria March 12-13.

At Vancouver, Belmont Braves, the Victoria league's No. 2 team, advanced to the final of the Hillside Invitational tournament Friday by defeating Sir Thomas Moore of Vancouver 64-54.

Lee Edmondson sparked Belmont with 21 points. Jim Kupiak added 15 points for the Braves, who led 32-27 at the half.

Belmont was to face the winner of a game between Hillside and Squamish in today's final.

SWEET REVENGE

At Oak Bay, the host club coached by Don Horwood gained sweet revenge for a 61-39 embarrassment suffered at the hands of Reynolds on Jan. 5.

Doug Walton and Duff McCaghy sparked Bays. Walton tossed in 18 points and picked off 20 rebounds while McCaghy popped 14 points and hauled in 12 rebounds.

Mt. Doug simply had too much depth for Dockers, who produced the game's high scorer in George Hyne (21 points) but had little else to offer.

Brian Wright topped the Rams, who led 26-12 at the half, with 14 points.

In case of ties in the standings, sudden-death games will be played to determine final placings—and the invitations to the Island tournament.

Moose Jaw Rink Wins Title Playoff

KAMLOOPS, (CP) — Saskatchewan won the Canadian schoolboy curling championship Friday night by defeating Northern Ontario, 11-5, in a playoff game.

The rinks had won last records of 9-1 in the 11-school round-robin tournament, forcing the playoff.

Skip Greg Montgomery's Moose Jaw rink scored a five on the sixth end of the extra game to break it wide open, and the Thunder Bay foursome headed by Doug Smith conceded after nine ends.

Montgomery's rink included brother Jim at second, lead Rocky Verborn and third Don Despins.

Manitoba, skipped by Murray Nye of Brandon, set up the

Saskatchewan Retains Title

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Canadian women's curling championship went to Saskatchewan for the third successive year Friday when Vera Pezer's rink defeated Alberta 9-2 in a playoff.

Saskatchewan was tied for third place with Prince Edward Island and British Columbia after the eighth round Thursday with 5-3 records. Alberta led 6-2.

Then Nicole Janelle's Quebec rink defeated Kay Baldwin's Edmonton team in the ninth and last scheduled round to create a three-way tie.

"I think Thursday night encouraged us the most," Miss Pezer said. "We knew we still had a mathematical possibility but that Quebec win gave us our real second chance."

Saskatchewan defeated Ina Hansen's British Columbia rink 10-7 with an extra end in the first playoff game Friday.

"We put the pressure on them right away," Miss Pezer said of the final round with Alberta. "It was our best-played round of the series."

Saskatchewan scored two in the fourth, one in the sixth, one in the seventh and two in each of the final ends.

Mrs. Baldwin's team scored in the third and fifth ends.

"We weren't as disappointed as we were Thursday by the loss to Quebec," the Alberta skip said.

Ontario, skipped by Helen Sillman, Mabel Mitchell's Manitoba rink, Prince Edward Island skipped by Marie Toole and Quebec finished with 5-4 records.

Sue Ann Bartlett's Newfoundland rink was 4-3.

New Brunswick, skipped by Shirley Pilon, was 3-6 and Clare Purdy's Nova Scotia entry failed to gain a single victory.

Stockers Push On By Tripping Uvic

Stocker North Americans have forged ahead of the idle Chemainus Blues in the tight race for first place in the Vancouver Island Hockey League.

Sparked by Graham Brown's three-point effort, Stockers clipped University of Victoria Vikings 5-2 at the Esquimalt Sports Centre Friday.

Victoria Cubs banged in three unanswered goals in the third period to come from behind and edge last-place Butler Brothers 5-3 in the night's other game.

Trailing 2-0, the Stockers came to life when Brown made the plays for their first two goals in the second period, then scored early in the third. Errol Goulden, Gino Lauzon, Bill Allen and Dave Williams were Stockers' other scorers.

Gord Neilson scored twice to power Cubs, who also collected singles from Mark Purdy, Wayne Hendry and Denny McLean.

Frazier Fires Sparring Mate

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —

One of heavyweight champion Joe Frazier's sparring partners has been barred from Frazier's camp, charged with making secret nightly reports to Muhammad Ali, who fights Frazier for the crown on March 8.

Don Warner, who has sparred with Frazier for four years, was fired by Yancey Durham, the camp's manager.

Warner could not be reached for comment.

"He's been under suspicion for two weeks now," Durham said of Warner. "I didn't want him as a sparring partner this time, but Joe said to give the guy a break."

'BEST MEDICAL CARE' FOR CANUCKS IN CALI

MONTREAL (CP) — Bob Osborne of Vancouver, chief de mission of Canada's 400 athletes to the fourth Pan-American Games at Cali, Colombia, next July, said the Canadian contingent "will receive the best medical care ever."

Osborne has departed for Cali, accompanied by Dr. Max Averon of Winnipeg and Bruce Hay of Vancouver. Dr. Averon will act as chief medical officer of the Canadian contingent, while Hay is secretary to the Pan-Am Games committee.

Seventeen medical personnel, including doctors, nurses, physiotherapists, and trainers, will accompany the athletes, Osborne said.

Osborne, Dr. Averon and Hay will inspect medical, welfare and housing facilities being set up for the athletes during this visit.

Outside Chance For Armstrong

(Times News Services)

The Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association had titles on the line today in four sports, but there was only one outside hope of Victoria cracking the winners' circle.

Victoria's single hope, albeit slim, remained in men's curling competition at Winnipeg.

The Viking foursome skipped by Jim Armstrong and including Ron Bell, Randy Chambers and Parker Jefferson finished Friday with a 4-3 won-lost record for a share of third place with Alberta and Regina.

Armstrong's rink split two games Friday, losing a tough 5-4 decision to British Columbia but rebounding to trounce Winnipeg 8-1.

SASKATCHEWAN LEADS

Saskatchewan's Rich Folk held the lead in the 10-rink competition with a 6-1 record while UBC was second with 5-2. At Saskatoon, British Columbia, Winnipeg, Saskatchewan and Alberta advanced to the women's curling semi-finals after completion of round-robin play Friday. Victoria's final hopes of making the playoffs faded after Saskatchewan scored a 6-5 victory over the Islanders.

Winners of the semi-finals were to meet this evening in the WCIAA title game.

Victoria also missed out in volleyball, bowing after a three-way playoff with UBC and Winnipeg.

CALGARY UNBEATEN

The three all finished the two-day, preliminary round-robin with 4-4 records to tie for fourth place behind undefeated Calgary (8-0), Manitoba (7-1) and Alberta (6-2).

UBC defeated Winnipeg and Victoria in straight sets to advance into today's semi-final against Manitoba. Calgary faced Alberta in the other semi-final.

Vikettes, who were 3-1 after Thursday's action, lost to Winnipeg, Manitoba and Alberta but beat Saskatchewan in Friday's games. Vikettes dropped into the consolation bracket along with Brandon, Lethbridge, Winnipeg and Saskatchewan.

Cordova Bay continued its winning ways Friday by topping Oak Bay 32-27 in an exhibition game.

Karen Battles To Grab Medal

LYON, France (CP) — Karen Magnussen, vowing that "it's not over until it's all finished," holds Canada's last chance for a medal in the world figure skating championships as the women's singles wind up tonight.

Miss Magnussen, 18-year-old blonde from Vancouver, holds down fourth place going into tonight's free-skating competition — her specialty — and hopes to move up to at least third place for a bronze medal.

Trixi Schuba of Austria has a solid first-place lead, built up in the school or compulsory figures, with Julie Lynn Holmes of the United States second and Rita Trapaneze of Italy third.

Miss Schuba has 1,263 points, Miss Holmes 1,173.3 and Miss Trapaneze 1,123.6. Miss Magnussen has 1,124.2 judging points, slightly ahead of the Italian girl but trails Miss Trapaneze by 1.5 ordinals or placement points which count more in tight situations.

With fewer ordinals counting for a better placing, Miss Schuba had nine; Miss Holmes 19.5, Miss Trapaneze 30.5 and Miss Magnussen 32.

MAY PASS ITALIAN

Miss Magnussen, who has vowed to "keep fighting," is expected to pick up points in the free skating tonight and perhaps pass the Italian girl.

Miss Magnussen vaulted from seventh to fourth in the 1970 world championships at Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, due to her free-skating performance on the last day, and missed a bronze medal by only a few points.

Karen does triple jumps and spins with ease in her free-skating performances and put on a spectacular series of jumps, pirouettes and intricate footwork to gain points at Ljubljana.

Linda Brauchmann, Miss Magnussen's coach, says her protegee is "doing well" while another Canadian entrant, Ruth Hutchinson of Vancouver, says "I am very hopeful for Karen."

Miss Hutchinson, a freshman performer in this year's event, is in 17th position. Diane Hall of Toronto, another rookie, is in 19th spot among 22 contestants.

WIN DANCE TITLE

Meanwhile, Ludmila Pachamova and Alexander Groshkov of the Soviet Union Friday night won their second straight dance championship.

Angelika and Erich Buck of West Germany were second and Judy Schwemmer and Jim Sladky of the U.S. third.

Louise Lind and Barry Soper of Vancouver were in 11th place.

Miss Pachamova and Groshkov got 515.8 judging points and 16 place points. The Bucks had 512.7 and 21 while the Americans received 514.5 and 20.

The Vancouver pair had 457.1 and 103.

The German pair finished in second place although they had fewer judging points and more place points than the Americans. However, the Russian judge had placed the Americans in fourth place while the West Germans had no placing lower than third.

FORD EXTENDS BOXING SKEIN

PORTLAND — Canadian Al Ford has taken another impressive step in his pursuit of the world lightweight boxing crown.

Fifth-ranked lightweight in the world, the Edmonton puncher extended his unbeaten string to 37 fights here Thursday night when he turned in a masterful performance to earn a unanimous decision over Juan Montoya.

Shooting for a title match against Ken Buchanan, the world champion from Scotland, Ford received a 100-90 vote from the referee while the judges gave him the nod over Montoya 100-92 and 100-98.

Vermont Girl Wins Slalom

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (AP) — Barbara Ann Cochran of Richmond, Vt., won Friday's giant slalom to sweep the women's events of the World Cup ski races while Italy's Gustavo Thoeni took the lead after the men's first giant slalom.

Miss Cochran, 20, was clocked in one minute, 9.44 seconds down the extremely icy and fast 3,100-foot, 44-gate trail as she captured her first giant slalom victory in cup competition. The course gave most of the European entrants trouble.

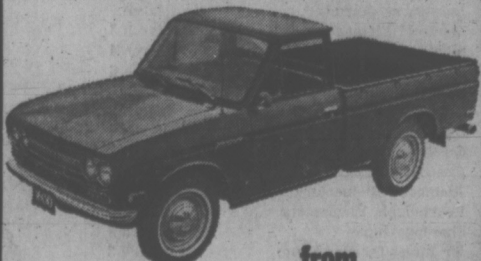

Karen Budge, 21, of Jackson Hole, Wyo., was second in the unofficial order of finish with a time of 1:10.08.

Miss Cochran won the women's slalom here Wednesday.

Thoeni whizzed through the 61 gates on the 4,400-foot men's run in 1:36.71, well ahead of the 1:38.90 posted by runner-up Christian Neufelder of West Germany.

Midgley met with Pete Keller, WBN director, in Eugene, Ore., last weekend to iron out the agreement following a poor showing in Victoria last season by drivers from the same circuit.

Only nine of the late-model super-stocks appeared for a meet at Western last season and NASCAR headquarters was forced to fine the offending drivers.

Bigger NASCAR Field Assured for Western

There will be more of them this time around when drivers from the Western Grand National circuit of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing return to Vancouver Island.

Reg Midgley, track manager at Western Speedway, announced today that a contract has been signed to assure a satisfactory supply of drivers and cars for a July 7 meet at the Langford oval.

Midgley met with Pete Keller, WBN director, in Eugene, Ore., last weekend to iron out the agreement following a poor showing in Victoria last season by drivers from the same circuit.

Only nine of the late-model super-stocks appeared for a meet at Western last season and NASCAR headquarters was forced to fine the offending drivers.

The Victoria date this season for the California-based 1968-71 super-stocks is part of a tightly-scheduled swing through the Pacific Northwest.

In just a little over, three weeks, starting June 26, the WGN cars will compete in 11 drivers last season, Midgley decided to schedule another race because "this is big-time racing and if we pass it up we may never get them back again."

Midgley said of the Victoria date: "He (Keller) has guaranteed us 20 Grand National cars."

Total purse for the 21 cars is approximately $5,300 with $100 extra for each additional American car that shows up. Although disturbed by the poor attendance of circuit

A combined super-stock and stock car event will kick off the new season at Western Speedway on April 17 with 34 additional meets scheduled to run through September.

Teacher Meet 'A Success'

By BOB MITCHELL
Staff Writer

One measure of the success of a teachers' convention is the number of persons still in attendance by the end of the day.

Organizers of the annual one-day convention of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association were calling the event an unqualified success Friday afternoon, as several hundred teachers mingled informally over beer with convention speakers in the lounge of the University of Victoria student union building.

Chief organizer Bob Mitchell of Lansdowne Junior Secondary said attendance at the convention was just under 1,400, most of it from local teachers.

REACTION MIXED

There was a mixed reaction to the six speakers, most of whom are critics in varying degrees of traditional education.

For example, while author John Holt, one of the best-known education writers in the United States, answered questions during the afternoon, some teachers could be seen silently shaking their heads.

Others groaned at what Holt had to say.

But young teachers who agreed wholeheartedly with Holt's analysis of traditional education and who share his vision of what education should become were confused as to what they should be doing to change the system.

TOO IDEALISTIC

Still others agreed there should be changes, but felt men like Holt are mapping a future too idealistic to ever become a reality.

One senior secondary teacher was bitter as he described his colleagues' refusal recently to even consider a student proposal regarding school dances. What hope is there for change, he asked, if teachers themselves refuse to listen to students, much less discuss their requests in a democratic fashion?

Holt, who lives in Boston, began teaching elementary grades in 1953, later describing his experiences in books entitled How Children Fail, How Children Learn, The Underachieving School and What Do We Do on Monday?

USURPED RIGHTS

During a question session Friday he said western society, by dividing human experience into "childhood" and "adulthood", has usurped the rights of children.

"The status of kids up to the age of 18 or 20 is almost that of a pet."

Compulsory education, curfew laws and discrimination against children under the guise of protecting them from the rigors of the "real" world.

The main function of schooling, Holt said, has been to label some in "innies" and others "jokers" from an early age.

Public education as an institution has also fostered the myth that credentials earned on the road from kindergarten to Ph.D. are the only measuring stick of a person's intelligence. Unfortunately, the "cash-in value" of a "school ticket" tends to depreciate as more and more people attain that level of education.

Where do we go from here? Part of the answer, Holt said, is to make schooling non-compulsory and allow students to decide for themselves what they will learn. The students should even have a voice in deciding how public funds should be spent on education.

LAWYERS OBSERVE

Holt suggested learning to read, like learning to talk, is best accomplished without formal instruction.

Holt was asked if non-compulsory education would foster chaos, in the event that people remained ignorant of the laws of the society. He replied that in Anglo Saxon societies lawyers have seen to it that the laws are too obscure for people to comprehend anyway.

Someone else asked how students would get by without skills like being able to divide and multiply if they were allowed to learn what they liked. Holt's answer was that figuring, once an important skill, is no longer very necessary because counting machines have relieved most people of the need for basic arithmetic.

Another questioner suggested children will have difficulty finding jobs if they don't pass through specialized training programs. Holt pointed out there is a poor correlation between what people study in school — even graduate school — and how they make a living.

"There is really very little evidence to show that what people learn in school has anything to do with how they earn a living."

THE WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Winter struck another blow at B.C. coastal areas Friday and deposited slightly more than five inches of snow on Vancouver Airport. This brought the record winter snowfall total to just over 65 inches. Only a few snow flurries were reported in the interior.

It remained unsettled and cold in most areas today. However, there were sunny periods in some coastal regions. By Sunday there should be considerable sunshine along the south coast as drier air arrives from the northwest. Most of the snow will be confined to the eastern interior and the central interior. It will continue cold in all areas.

TV MOVIES

Tonight

4:30: Channel 5: Diplomatic Courier (1962 drama), Tyrone Power, Patricia Neal. Plot offers no new twists but keeps the pace fast and suspenseful.

8:00: Channel 13: Triple Feature: Girls in Chains (1943 drama), Arline Judge. Young woman sets out to fight a local government and their corrupt administration of the Home for Delinquent Girls.

2: Rescue Squad (1935 drama), Sidney Blackmer, Ralph Forbes. Story about the men who work for the fire-fighting brigade.

3: Shake Hands with Murder (1944 mystery), Iris Adrian, Frank Jenks. Fairly good mystery.

8:30: Channel 5: McLintock! (1963 western), Joyn Wayne, Maureen O'Hara. Comedy about a cattle baron whose wife is determined to bedevil him into a divorce.

8:30: Channel 6: Harlow (1965 drama), Carroll Baker, Raf Vallone. Fictionalized biography of Jean Harlow.

9:00: Channel 2: The Third Secret (British; 1964 mystery), Stephen Boyd, Pamela Franklin. Absorbing psychological drama.

9:00: Channel 8: The Film-Flam Man (1967 comedy), George C. Scott, Sue Lyon. A classic car chase highlight this comedy in which Scott plays the part of a con artist.

9:00: Channel 12: Something Wild (1961 drama), Carroll Baker, Ralph Meeker. An emotionally disturbed young girl is saved from doing away with herself by a man who turns the incident to his advantage.

11:15: Channel 5: Sink the Bismarck! (British; 1960 drama), Kenneth More, Dana Wynter. Excellent special effects heighten this well done semi-documentary style war story.

11:45: Channel 3: Devil Makes Three (1952 drama), Gene Kelly, Pier Angeli. American GI in postwar Germany becomes involved in black market smuggling after meeting a night club girl.

Sunday

6:00: Channel 11: PT 109 (1962 drama), Cliff Robertson, Ty Hardin. The story of John F. Kennedy, Naval hero of World War II, and his exploits in the Pacific.

9:00: Channel 4: Incident in San Francisco (TV drama), Richard Kiley, Ruth Roman. A man tries to stop a gang from beating up an old man, and finds himself charged with murdering one of the attackers.

9:00: Channel 12: Wild in the Country (1961 drama), Elvis Presley, Tuesday Weld. Rural boy is saved from delinquency by a female social worker, who encourages him in his writing talent.

10:00: Channel 7: King of Kings (1961 drama), Jeffrey Hunter, Robert Ryan. Excellently produced story of Jesus Christ.

11:30: Channel 6: The Savage (1952 western), Charlton Heston, Susan Morrow. Outdoor drama covers familiar ground, is done well enough to please the adventure fans.

11:30: Channel 4: Executive Suite (1954 drama) William Holden, June Allyson. An executive suite becomes the scene of intense struggle upon the sudden death of a corporation president.

11:45: Channel 2: Winchester 73 (1967 western), Tim Tryon, John Saxon. Story of a renegade after a valuable rifle. Moves sluggishly, is just another routine western.

POKEY, an alienated Indian youth whose story is told on The Manipulators series on CBC-TV Sunday is played by Len George, son of the famous actor Chief Dan George.

WEEKEND SPORTS

WEEKEND'S TOP TV SHOWS

TONIGHT

HOCKEY, 5 p.m., Channels 2, 6. Toronto Maple Leafs tangle with the Buffalo Sabres.

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE, 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. Andrew Duggan is tonight's guest. He plays a millionaire industrialist whose revolutionary son defects to Russia, taking with him a formula for a lethal nerve gas he had developed.

ANDY WILLIAMS SHOW, 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. Tonight's guests: Cass Elliot, Jonathan Winters and the Association.

MY THREE SONS, 8:30 p.m., Channels 7, 12. Brooke Bundy is tonight's guest as a beautiful young woman who shamelessly manipulates the Douglas males. Barbara, Katie and even little Dottie see thru, but not the men.

ARNIE, 9 p.m., Channel 7. Arnie's visiting spinster sister (Carol Arthur) has a date with his bachelor boss (Roger Bowen). Arnie is overjoyed until his secretary (Elaine Shore) warns him about the boss's reputation as a wolf.

MARY TYLER MOORE SHOW, 9 p.m., Channel 8 and 9:30 p.m. Channel 7.

Guest star Michael Callan plays a young man who dresses well and drives a flashy foreign sports car, but has no visible means of support. Rhoda (Valerie Harper) becomes infatuated but is afraid he is connected with the underworld.

MANNIX, 10 p.m., Channel 7. Mannix has more trouble with his clients than any detective deserves. Tonight's guest star, Diane Keaton, plays a young heiress who hires him to find her father's murderer. Mannix becomes suspicious of his client's motives when he learns her chief suspect is the executor of her father's estate who has been trying to control her spending.

SATURDAY NIGHT AT THE MOVIES, 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. "McLintock" (1963), with John Wayne, Maureen O'Hara, Yvonne DeCarlo, Chill Wills, Jack Kruschen, Patrick Wayne, Stefanie Powers, Jerry Van Dyke and Edgar Buchanan. This isn't one of Wayne's best, but he plays a brawling cattle baron with gusto. Miss O'Hara is stifled as his suspicious, estranged wife.

SUNDAY

HOCKEY, 11 a.m., Channels 7, 12. The Toronto Maple Leafs meet the Boston Bruins at the Boston Garden.

CHILDREN'S FILM FESTIVAL, 4:30 p.m., Channel 12. Horses, wild and wooden, are the subjects of today's two short French-made films. "Glamador" is the name of an uninhabited island where wild horses run free. The film is about a boy who learns to respect them and to care enough to give up his own horse. "The Little Wooden Horse" is about a small French boy who rescues a wooden carousel horse from its cruel master.

LASSIE, 7 p.m., Channel 7. Part I of a two-part episode in which Lassie's reunion with one of her puppies almost ends in tragedy when a rattlesnake attacks.

WILD KINGDOM, 7 p.m., Channel 5. "Killers of the Rupununi." The Rupununi is a wilderness area deep within the interior of British Guiana in South America. Host Marling Perkins gives us a look at its unique wildlife.

WONDERFUL WORLD OF DISNEY, 6 p.m., Channel 2. (Rerun) "The Moon Pilot" (conclusion) with Tom Tryon, Brian Keith, Edmond O'Brien and Dany Saval. A mysterious woman from another planet lures a reluctant astronaut away just before he is scheduled for a moon mission.

THE FBI, 8 p.m., Channel 5. Inspector Erineline tracks an AWOL Army private who robbed a New Mexico bank and his companion, an adventurous girl. Guest stars: Michael Douglas, Donna Mills, Richard Kaiton and Skip Ward.

ED SULLIVAN SHOW, 8 p.m., Channels 2, 6, 7 and 12. Tonight's guests: Sid Caesar, Shirley Bassey and George Carlin.

GLEN CAMPBELL GOODTIME HOUR, 9 p.m., Channel 7. Andy Griffith, Bobby Vinton, Anne Murray and Shekey Greene are tonight's guests.

ABC SUNDAY NIGHT MOVIE, 9 p.m., Channel 4. "Incident in San Francisco." Christopher Connelly plays a young reporter who believes in the innocence of an accused murderer and then tries to prove it. What he gets for his troubles is involvement in the underworld, frightened witnesses, difficult-to-handle policemen and run-ins with his own paper's editors. The good cast includes Dean Jagger, Richard Kiley, Leslie Nielsen, Tim O'Connor and Phyllis Thaxter.

NET MASTERPIECE THEATRE, 9 p.m., Channel 9. "The First Churchills: The Queen Commands." In an atmosphere of national panic, John Churchill is falsely accused of treason and is imprisoned in the Tower of London. Queen Mary dies, leaving William III to rule England alone.

BOLD ONES, 10 p.m., Channel 5. Hal Holbrook has tonight's segment as Sen. Hayes Stowe. The story could have been taken from real life yesterday's front page. Stowe's national economic self-help bill is endangered after a government accountant charges that poverty funds in Stowe's home state have been misused.

AMERICAN SPORTSMAN, 3:15 p.m., Channel 4. Dandy Don Meredith, the former Dallas Cowboys quarterback turned Monday night football commentator, hunts cape buffalo in Africa, and Gene Stallings, head football coach at Texas A and M, fishes for bass in Florida with Curt Gowdy.

MEET THE PRESS, 1 p.m., Channel 5. Former vice-president Hubert Humphrey, returned to the Senate, is today's guest. He'll be interviewed by Laurence Spivak, May Frankel of the New York Times, Clark Mollenhoff, Des Moines Register and Tribune, and Charles Quinn, NBC News.

AFTERSHOCKS LINGER ON

By JAY SHARBUTT

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The quake is over, but the aftershocks linger. So does the cleanup and repair work throughout California's battered San Fernando Valley.

The jolt which hit the Los Angeles area Feb. 9 killed 64 persons, injured more than 1,000 and caused hundreds of millions of dollars in property damage. The valley, affected most by the earthquake, is slowly battling its way back to normal.

Ed Boves, a contractor, said homeowners seeking damage estimates are "running us ragged."

The Southern California Gas Co., faced with disruption of service to 18,500 families in hard-hit Sylmar and neighboring San Fernando City after the quake, "is almost back to normal," a spokesman reports.

General Telephone Co. is reported by a spokesman to be in good shape in every section except Sylmar, a pleasant, relatively smog-free community nestled against the starkly beautiful San Gabriel Mountains.

The phone company spokesman says that while full service has been restored to the area's police, firemen and hospitals, only limited service is available to some 8,000 Sylmar residents.

CENTRE RUINED

The reason: The quake destroyed most of the equipment in a $4.5 million switching centre in Sylmar.

San Fernando City, whose 18,000 residents underwent a quake-caused drought—the shock shattered the city water lines and cracked two of three reservoirs beyond repair—finally is off the water wagon.

For nine days after the quake, up to 37 water trucks were supplying city residents with drinking water. Most water lines now are back in service.

How long will it be before San Fernando is as it was before the quake? Comstock offers a glum guess: "It'll be at least one year."

Six Red Cross centres to provide emergency cash, food and housing to valley residents still are in operation.

HUBBARD

'I'm Dying To Play A Prostitute'

NEW YORK — Elizabeth Hubbard's life does seem to be overly full of woman doctors.

The grey-eyed blonde is the daughter of a woman doctor; she has played Dr. Althea Davis in the NBC soap opera "The Doctors" for several years, and she is currently being seen as a woman doctor and the principal love interest in the Columbia Pictures film, "I Never Sang for My Father."

It is her first film, and although she has had extensive stage experience, she is cautious about the possibilities of Hollywood. "You might say I hope I am moving into a movie career," she said with a smile, over a drink at the Algonquin Hotel in New York.

"I'm not doing addicts and prostitutes. That's the sort of thing they make in New York, and since I live here perhaps there is some hope for me to do one."

"I'm dying to play a prostitute. I always play ladies; titches perhaps, but ladies. They always think they're typecasting. I suppose, but it's hardly fair. You don't have to be a murderer to play one, and I would love to play a prostitute or an addict."

It is not surprising that Liz Hubbard is cast as a lady so often. She is the product of private-school upbringing in New York and the intellectual purities of Radcliffe College. Although her primary interest during her school years was singing, she left Radcliffe to enroll in the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art in London, where she became the first American ever to win the Academy's Silver Medal of Achievement.

"I'm still nervous about singing, yes," Liz said. "I want to get up in a pretty gown and sing a song the way they used to. I don't seriously long to do opera any more, though, although I love it, but I would love to play some part as an opera singer. I could do that very well."

"I used to take singing lessons, but my teacher died. Last year I went through a thing where I was going to have a nightclub act. I even did a song that was written for me by the man who did the lyrics for 'Two by Two,' but I don't really want a nightclub act. I'm a morning person," she added simply. "I don't really want that kind of life."

DOES THE HIGH COST OF DYING OFFEND YOU?

Are you one of the thoughtful ones who is concerned that your relatives may be swept with emotion into paying hundreds too much for your funeral, money which could be put to far better use among the living? Are you disturbed by costly caskets, displaying of remains, etc.? Would you like to sit down in complete privacy with a form we will mail you, and record NOW exactly what type of funeral or memorial service you would like... whether you wish friends to send flowers or donate to a charity of your choice... whether you would like to donate your eyes or other tissue to help the living? Would you like to see MAXIMUM funeral costs in print, instead of MINIMUMS? This is not a society for the poor. It is a society for the THOUGHTFUL... in all walks of life. ## HOW MUCH FOR SHIRLEY TEMPLE'S TOYS?

Hollywood Heritage on Auction Block

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Twentieth Century Fox auctioned off its heritage Thursday night without a star in sight. Bidders paid thousands of dollars for memorabilia going back 43 years.

Not even studio representatives were present at the public auction held five miles from the lot which produced countless films down through the years.

Items from "Hangman's House," starring Victor McLaglen in 1928 to props from such recent films as Oscar-nominated "M-A-S-H" fell under the hammer.

The Sotherby-Parkes-Bernet auctioneers put up for bids some 2,000 items in 86 lots.

Five more auction sessions will be held through Sunday.

Many antique pieces of furniture, paintings and vehicles were not identified with particular stars or motion pictures. Others, however, were illustrated in the catalogues with stars in scenes from such landmark movies as "Cleopatra," "Forever Amber," "The King and I," and "Charlie Chan."

The items ranged from toys used by Shirley Temple in her earliest films to Japanese dive bombers featured in "Tora! Tora! Tora!" which is currently in release.

Miss Temple's toys — from the film "Captain January"

— four sets of wood blocks, two pairs of carved wooden soldiers standing 6-foot-3, and a single wooden soldier were purchased by seven different bidders.

The toys brought a total of $1,065.

More than 80 motion pictures made at the studio are represented in the auction.

Sentimentally it was a sad evening for film folk. The names of such late stars as Marilyn Monroe, Humphrey Bogart, Laurel and Hardy, Tyrone Power and Ronald Colman were associated with a variety of objects which they had touched or used or worn in motion pictures.

But there was nothing sentimental about the bidding. It began briskly when a pair of candelabra was sold for $825, the second item on the auctioneer's list. The first was a walnut armchair that appeared in a scene from "The Holy Terror" starring Bogart. It went for $350.

Many of the bidders were gallery owners across the country. Others were ordinary citizens who hoped to come away with a bit of Hollywood history.

Unlike the massive MGM auction of last year, the 20th Century Fox auction featured fewer items but greater quality.

Frequently items auctioned were used in more than one picture.

Typical was a Louis XVI-style mantel garniture which was part of the scenery in "Nob Hill," "Lillian Russell," and "Charley's Aunt." It sold for $600.

The first night was devoted to furniture and decorations.

Nobel Prize Winner Dies

STOCKHOLM (UPI) —

Prof. Theodor "The" Svedberg, Swedish nuclear scientist and Nobel Prize winner, has died at the age of 86, his family announced today.

Svedberg won international fame for his construction of a centrifuge, which allowed him and his assistants to weigh and measure albuminous molecules.

He won the 1926 Nobel Prize for chemistry for his work.

CHESS MASTER

International Chess Master
PROBLEM:
By P. Tea Cate, Holland

WHITE: 7
White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

HINTS FOR BEGINNERS
A game may be termed well-started (set openings apart) when the pieces are brought out so that no piece obstructs the action of another, and that each piece be so well placed that it cannot be attacked with impunity.
Walker

Surprises do happen in chess tournaments. But they are rare!
In the Fourth Grandmasters Tournament in Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, a few local players were admitted to play at the last moment to fill the places of a couple of no-shows. One of those newcomers to international chess was 25-year-old Albin Planinc of Ljubljana, who had done well in the Yugoslav championship held a month earlier. Planinc won 10½ out of 15. He lost only one game, this to second place Szelezar Gligoric, also of Yugoslavia, who scored 10. Planinc beat grandmasters like Alexander M. a tanovic, 1969 Yugoslav Champ, with a King's Gambit Opening (something almost unheard of in recent tournament play). Wolfgang Unzicker, Germany, Florin Gheorghiu, Romania, and Gedeon Barcza, Hungary. He received the international master title and later went on to become a grandmaster. He deserves these honors for his dashing style. See his game with Matanovic from this event.

In the first tournament after winning first prize at Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, Albin Planinc did not do so well, but on the seventh board in the USSR-Yugoslavia match, he scored 1½ points out of four against grandmaster Alexander Ljutikov of the USSR.
In the game with the Russian, Planinc once again created a sensation. He made what you might call the move of the year. Take a look at the game and see if you don't agree with me on this.

Mideast Threat Supreme Editor

SACKVILLE, N.B. (CP) — Rev. A. C. Forrest, editor of the United Church Observer, says the Middle East is the most significant and dangerous trouble spot in the world.
Dr. Forrest said he can not foresee Israel withdrawing from territory captured in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.
Rather, Israel would use the land for expansion, "especially for Jewish immigration from Russia."
It is assumed, he said, during a visit to the Mount Allison University campus here, that Israel possesses nuclear weapons and would use them if she felt it necessary.
Dr. Forrest said Israel can do much to alleviate the plight of Palestinian refugees by allowing the 170,000 who fled in 1967 to return to their homes.

Canada Marks Golden Jubilee of Insulin Find

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT
The golden jubilee of the isolation of insulin, a pancreatic secretion used to control diabetes, will be observed by a 6-cent, vertical-format Canadian multi-color to be issued Wednesday.
It was at the University of Toronto medical school that the first extraction of insulin was made. Responsible were John R. R. Macleod (1876-1935), James B. Collip (b. 1892), Charles H. Best (b. 1899), and Frederick G. Banting (1891-1941). The latter was knighted in 1934.
The 1923 Nobel Prize in the medicine and physiology category was awarded to Banting and Macleod, and they shared it with Best and Collip.
Some instruments (such as a hypodermic and test tubes) and materials from the historic laboratory where insulin was "born" are shown on the stamp.

It was designed by Ray Webber of Toronto, and was lithographed in blue, yellow, black and red by the British American Bank Note Co. Ltd., Ottawa. Marginal inscriptions printed on the four corners of the panes of 50 procurable from the Philatelic Service in Ottawa give the name of the designer.
The stamps represent: 10ch, the gold funerary mask of Pharaoh Tutankhamun; 75ch, a winged bull from Mesopotamia; 1.25nu, head of the Greek god Zeus; 2nu, the she-wolf suckling Remus and Romulus (according to mythology, those twins founded Rome in 753 B.C.); 3nu, head of the Roman statesman, orator and author Marcus Tullius Cicero (106-43 BC); 4 nu, head of the statue

A 10-kopek pictorial celebrating the 2,500th anniversary of the Crimean city of Simferopol (Pheodosia) was issued Jan. 28 by the U.S.S.R.
The 100th anniversary of the Danish Women's Association is the theme of an 80-ore adhesive put on sale by Denmark Feb. 25. It depicts the pioneer Danish feminist Mathilde Fibiger.
In past years, the Kingdom of Bhutan has released such oddities as stamps in 3D, steel stamps and silk stamps. That nation's newest philatelic novelty to be presented is plastic stamps in relief. This new issue, entitled History of Sculpture, consists of eight imperforate stamps and two souvenir sheets. They are self-adhesive.

The stamps represent: 10ch, the gold funerary mask of Pharaoh Tutankhamun; 75ch, a winged bull from Mesopotamia; 1.25nu, head of the Greek god Zeus; 2nu, the she-wolf suckling Remus and Romulus (according to mythology, those twins founded Rome in 753 B.C.); 3nu, head of the Roman statesman, orator and author Marcus Tullius Cicero (106-43 BC); 4 nu, head of the statue of King David by Michelangelo (1475-1564); 5nu, The Age of Bronze (1877) by Auguste Rodin (1840-1917); and 6nu, Head of Woman by Amedeo Modigliani (1884-1920).

An official announcement of that set, which the Government of Bhutan believes to have cost more to make than any other stamps, and which took over five years to develop, contains this truthful statement: "Although some philatelists will no doubt abhor Bhutan's commercialism in the stamp market field, they cannot deny that this little Himalayan country is the world's leader in unusual and truly beautiful stamp designs."

Sometime in January, the United Arab Republic released a miniature sheet holding a 100-millieme and a 200-millieme stamp, and recording the dedication of the Aswan high dam (started in 1960). Both stamps show the dam's generating station, and President Gamal Abdel Nasser (1918-70).
Fish are portrayed on a quintet placed on sale last month by the French Southern and Antarctic Territories (TAAF).

The third instalment in Norfolk Island's definitive set featuring birds came out Feb. 24. These four latest supplements' picture: 2c, two Norfolk Island thickheads; 5c, a Norfolk Island green parrot; 15c, a Norfolk Island pigeon (extinct); and 50c, a red parrot. The next and last addition will appear June 16.

Waffle Group Draws Lewis Criticism

By BUD THOMAS

TORONTO (CP) — Disapproval of the Waffle group, which wants self-determination for Quebec, was voiced Friday night when the five candidates seeking the leadership of the federal New Democratic Party spoke at an all-candidates meeting.

At one point the Waffle group was called "an organization within an organization" which "will deter us from our objective as a party."

Leadership of the party is up for grabs when T. C. Douglas retires in April.

One candidate, David Lewis, member of Parliament for York South, expressed disagreement with Waffle candidate James Laxer, a Queen's University professor, on two issues before an audience of about 450.

However, all the candidates, including Edward Broadbent, member of Parliament for Oshawa-Whitby, Frank Howard, MP for Skeena and John Harney, former secretary of the Ontario NDP, made frequent references to the need for party solidarity in supporting policy proposals to be adopted at the April leadership convention in Ottawa.

ATTACKS LIBERALS

Mr. Lewis, currently considered to have the edge in the race by all other candidates except Mr. Harney who said Friday he and Mr. Lewis are running neck and neck, launched a bitter attack on the Liberal government, saying that because of its "reactionary" policies, Canada is "more threatened from the inside... than ever before."

"After almost three years, Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his government stand condemned as one of the most reactionary governments in the history of our country," said Mr. Lewis.

Mr. Laxer, who said Friday he expects 25 per cent of the votes on the first ballot at the leadership convention, criticized "anti-labor legislation" in Canada and said there are moves afoot both in Canada and the U.S. to dissolve the auto pact between the two countries which "would result in the loss of thousands of jobs."

DOESN'T LIKE STAND

The Waffle candidate also reiterated his stand on self-determination for Quebec in deciding whether or not to sever economic and political ties with English-speaking Canada.

Mr. Broadbent, who also expressed disfavor with the Waffle proposal for Quebec self-determination, said:

"A separated Canada would mean American capital could divide and rule. And a divided Canada would set back socialism perhaps 30 years in this country."

If Quebec wishes to express its self-determination, he said, the party could not "ignore reality" by condemning Quebec, but should work out an alternative favorable to the whole of Canada.

Mr. Howard said the important thing to the party was to select the candidate with the "best chance" of developing the party.

He expressed disapproval of the Waffle group, "an organization within an organization," which "will deter us from our objective as a party."

SPLIT IN PANTHER PARTY

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A split in the leadership of the Black Panther party has emerged in a televised exchange between Panther leaders Huey P. Newton and Eldridge Cleaver.

From his self-imposed exile headquarters in Algeria, Cleaver denounced Panther Chief of Staff David Hilliard for the "regrettable" purge of party members and for causing the party to fall "apart at the seams."

Newton, co-founder of the party and newly-named supreme servant, said he hated to disagree with Cleaver "but, of course, you leave me no other choice." Newton appeared on KGO-TV's Jim Dunbar program Friday, where he talked to Cleaver by phone.

Newton said that the purge was necessary and that Hilliard was not responsible. "I'm responsible for it. I take the responsibility,"

The Cleaver-Newton dispute results from the recent expulsion of 11 Panthers on trial in New York for bomb conspiracy, and the purge of Elmer (Geronimo) Pratt, a Los Angeles Panther kicked out after he was accused of murder.

Mountbatten Aide to Talk

Rear-Admiral J. Hoare, personal representative of Earl Mountbatten, will address the Vancouver Island United Services Institute on the establishment of a world college to be located on the island.

Lt.-Col. F. D. H. Nelson, re-elected president, said the date of his visit to Victoria would be announced at a later date.

Other officers selected: Supt. A. S. McNeil, vice-president; Squadron Leader C. Ashton-Cross, librarian; Lt.-Col. F. J. Picking, public relations; Lt.-Cmdr. M. A. Considine, Lt.-Cmdr. H. Lane Elliott, Lt.-Cmdr. G. C. Ness, Major K. S. Crabtree, Capt. H. R. Larsen, Lt.-Col. A. E. Sherwin, Lt. N. Horton, Group Capt. E. A. McGown, Flt. Lt. H. L. Woolson and Supt. G. M. MacKay, directors.

Major-General G. R. Pearkes and General Frederick R. Sharp, chief of the defence staff of the Canadian Armed Forces, are honorary members.

Smile Show Faces Collapse After Denied Home Theatre

By CHERYL BORRIS

It's curtains for Jerry Gosley's Smile Show after 18 consecutive years if a theatre is not found before the end of March.

The Victoria Theatre Guild has denied Gosley permission to use Langham Court Theatre — the Smile Show's traditional home — most of this summer.

In an interview Friday, Gosley talked about his predicament. "Every year I write for permission to use Langham Court Theatre for the summer months. This year I received a letter from the theatre guild explaining that the theatre would only be available for the month of July."

Gosley said that although he has used Langham Court Theatre off and on for 18 years he has never taken his tenancy for granted.

"On the other hand," he said, "I've had no reason to think that I'd be denied use of the theatre."

The letter stated that the guild will make certain repairs and renovations during June and that the theatre is required for rehearsals in August.

Theatre Guild president Mary Jane Scott commented: "We have had two extremely successful seasons in the past two years, and as the present season ends in May we must make necessary renovations during June. We have also decided on an early start in September with a production from the University of Victoria's Players Club. These students must rehearse during August."

She said, "The theatre has not been refused as such, it's just that we have had to reduce the time the theatre is available. We are very sorry this has had to happen."

Mrs. Scott said that the guild has in other years rehearsed in places other than the Langham Court Theatre but this year was unable to find alternative space.

The Smile Show, which started 30 years ago and has been playing for 18 consecutive years to Victoria audiences, has already begun this summer's program. The cast has been lined up, centennial skits have been prepared, and "hundreds of dollars" of advertising has been sold.

Gosley has been planning to release a recording in conjunction with the summer "I" production, which, he says, will not be released if the show folds.

The Smile Show, which played to over 10,000 people in Victoria last year, has performed for audiences and conventions year round in Victoria, Vancouver, Harrison Hot Springs, Ottawa, Edmonton, and Salem, Oregon.

Hundreds of regular visitors from the United States see the Smile Show, every year and send letters and cards of appreciation.

The revue is a sort of London music hall production, loaded with skits, songs, dancing, comedy and nostalgia.

Sam Lane, executive member of the Greater Victoria Tourist Bureau, said Friday, "Gosley has done a magnificent job keeping a form of entertainment alive that is exclusive of anywhere else on the North American continent. This would be a sad blow to our expression of Victoriana. This is something we shouldn't lose."

ONE MINOR INJURY resulted from this fence-wrecking collision at Whiteside and Raymond Friday afternoon, Judith Stewart, 26, driver of the van, suffered an eyebrow cut that required two stitches. Driver of the other vehicle, Mark H. Colegrave, of 560 Mountfield Street, was not injured. Damage to the vehicles totalled $1,000. Damage to the fence was $100.

VANCOUVER BURIED AGAIN

Snow Everywhere But Here

Logging operations in the higher reaches of the Sooke Hills have been further stalled by snow which fell Friday. In most parts of Vancouver Island.

Since December, snow conditions in the hills have slowed down logging considerably, and the latest fall, varying between four and six inches, will delay resumption of operations, a logging contractor said.

The weather office said seven inches of snow fell in the Nanaimo region early this morning, but no snowflurries are expected for southern Vancouver Island.

Friday at rush hour a squall of wet snow hit Victoria, but it subsided as quickly as it came 30 minutes later.

The temperature Sunday will rise to 40 and the day will be sunny.

RCMP said the road conditions on the Malahat was good, but motorists should be cautious of ice patches, especially after sundown.

In Vancouver, police advised motorists to spend the weekend at home as snowflurries continued over the lower mainland today.

Three inches of snow fell in Vancouver this morning, raising the snowfall since Friday to seven inches.

More than 66 inches of snow has fallen on Vancouver so far this winter compared with the previous record fall of 55.2 inches recorded during the winter of 1964-65.

Friday's snowstorm, caught

Vancouver motorists unprepared for another winter onslaught. Some who had optimistically replaced winter tires at the beginning of the month abandoned their vehicles on slippery hills or left them in downtown parking lots.

Buses were running about one hour behind schedule and a B.C. Hydro spokesman said relief drivers had to be driven along like-bus routes to find their vehicles.

Asked about rumors that Vancouver Island might lose the college in favor of a site near Vancouver, Butler replied: "No sites have been looked at on the mainland."

In an interview, Matthews said that the college committee has options on land 30 miles north of Victoria, and is also investigating properties on the west coast, south of Long Beach.

The college will be a joint

By PAT DUFOUR

Speculations on where a Pacific Rim college will be built may be ended March 25 when a top official of the United World Colleges and the man who becomes headmaster of the Canadian college in June meet in Victoria.

Chairman of the college site committee, Bertram Butler, 513 Transit, said this week that Rear-Admiral Desmond Hoare, UWC provost in Britain, is expected here March 25. He is currently in Singapore where another international college is due to be established soon.

The college's head, Jack Matthews, 42, now headmaster of Lakeside College, a boys' boarding school near Peterborough, Ont., is also expected on the west coast at that time.

The Canadian committee has taken options on possible sites in the Vancouver Island area but Butler declined to say where they were.

He did not rule out the possibility that the college might be established on one of the Gulf Islands.

The first UWC college, established in 1962, is located in the 14th century castle of St. Donat's in South Wales.

Matthews' 18-year-old son, Angus, is head of the sea rescue service at St. Donat's.

On the same pattern as St. Donat's, Matthews says the Pacific college will have a curriculum that, apart from academic subjects, will provide challenge through such ventures as a ski patrol, sea

Canadian-United States effort and 75 per cent of its initial cost of $3 million will be provided by the American college committee.

Matthews says the college will be aiming at an enrolment of 300, of which 200 will be boys in the 16-to-18-year age bracket.

He explains: "We want to take students who are in their last two years of secondary school. We have partly chosen that age group so that the nationalistic tendencies of their parents will not be so ingrained."

Of the 300 students, about 100 will come from North America, most of the remainder from Pacific Rim countries, and some from Europe.

Barry Tackaberry, secretary of the Canadian committee, says that the $3 million "is just the beginning. Eventually it is hoped that all the students will be attending under scholarships."

Scholarships at St. Donat's, where 40 Canadian students make up the largest contingent, are valued at about $2,500 a year. Two scholarships have been provided by the New Brunswick government, and one each by British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario and the Canadian Labor Congress.

Matthews says the students will progress toward an international baccalaureate, recognized international standard for admission into the world's major universities.

Instruction will be given in English by Canadian and American teachers.

Matthews explains: "The international baccalaureate is courses in all traditional subjects with which Canadians are familiar but, in addition, most languages of the world, economics, philosophy, anthropology and oceanography."

He speculates on what may be achieved through the association of boys from various countries and backgrounds at the college:

"You almost dream of when there will be a world understanding and the two people who are in the top position to do something about it are old school buddies."

Drowning Victim Identified

Police have identified the victim of a drowning accident on East Sooke Lake Thursday as Robert Joseph Jackson, 21, a recent arrival in the area from Burwash Landing in the Yukon.

Sooke RCMP said Johnson, who had been living with his wife's family at 4894 Tavenue, had gone canoeing on the lake and was last seen alive about noon. His overturned craft was found near shore at 2 p.m., and Johnson's body was recovered by Armed Forces divers at the bottom of the lake at 6 p.m.

An inquest will be held next week.

High-Speed Downtown Chase Leads to Raft of Charges

A teen-aged driver faced a barrage of charges in provincial court today after he ran a roadblock and led police cruisers on a high-speed chase through downtown streets early this morning.

William Samuel Joseph, 19, of 409 Ker Ave., pleaded guilty to criminal negligence, failing to remain at the scene of an accident, driving without insurance and driving without a licence.

He was remanded to March

1 for sentence by Judge William Ostler.

Evidence showed Joseph was stopped by police on Belleville at 4:40 a.m., fled from that cruiser and slipped past another police car trying to set up a roadblock. Police said he ran half a dozen red lights and as many stop signs before knocking over a garage car, sideswiping a parked auto and running into a building on Douglas near Yates.

At one point he was travelling the wrong way on Yates Street near Douglas at high speed. Police said he had a blood-alcohol reading of .23. Ostler said that with Joseph driving, a car became a "dangerous machine."

Flora Race, 64, of 450 Dallas Road, was fined $250 for shoplifting from The Bay.

The accused, a practical nurse, pleaded guilty to stealing hair spray, soap, three balls of wool, panty hose, a thermos bottle, a meat thermometer, a steam iron rest and other items.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please give me the name and address of the business in town that recycles newspapers?—J.K.C.

A. There is no local business which recycles newspapers although the Salvation Army will accept bundled newspapers if they are brought to its depot at 531 Johnson. A glut of waste newspaper and certain pollution problems in recycling them makes it uneconomical at the present time.

OUR NEW VICTORIA PRESS building is still little more than a hole in the ground. But an interesting one, and as a confirmed sidewalk superintendant, I spend rather too much time watching while the construction industry's oversized Dinky toys get on with the job.

The scene at the moment, as viewed from our newsroom windows, is more or less humdrum. A diesel cat is loading earth into a truck, a giraffe-necked mobile crane rears alongside a stack of pipe-sections, and a construction man in white hard hat is pounding stakes.

I hope this means that the queen of the show, a sophisticated hole-digger of impressive heft, is going to return for another engagement.

This truck-mounted behemoth appeared on location a few mornings ago, with its steel tower or derrick lowered neatly along its back. Guided by hand-signals from below, the operator jockeyed his rig into position. Up rose the tower, hydraulically from horizontal to vertical by hoisting arms on either side.

More signalling and jockeying. Then, with a touch so dainty that it would scare crack an egg, the maestro at the controls lowered the biggest auger I ever saw in my life. It came to rest precisely on the peg that marked where the first hole was to be delved.

A couple of hands with spades loosened the peg. The auger twirled briefly, then emerged with a few hundred pounds of earth and clay packed in a neat cylinder around its bit.

At that point, my phone summoned me away. By the time I was able to rejoin the gallery, the machine had chomped out a hole that a country well-digger with hand tools couldn't match in a week.

Wonderful to watch... but time-stealing if you're business elsewhere!

Charles White, who thought up and developed the Undersea Gardens, is free to admit that he has been a compulsive fisherman since he was old enough to crank a reel. A while ago, he decided to share the savvy acquired through his years as biologist, guide, and highline sport fisherman.

The result is a soft-cover book of 39 pages—one of Saltire Publishing Company's useful "How to Catch" series—that deserves a place in every salmon-chaser's bookshelf. Or, better still, in his tackle kit, where it can be consulted when strikes are few.

Profusely and entertainingly illustrated by Nelson Dewey, Charles White's "How to Catch Salmon" deals in detail with gear and methods, fish-finding, time-and-tide influence, and even how to clean the catch.

Along with a wealth of sound advice, Charles offers a truth of which we're all too frequently reminded.

"Salmon are the most ornery creatures on the face of the earth," he writes, "and cannot be depended upon to do any particular thing at any particular time."

As I. M. Sherwin of 2810 Sea View Road points out, Victorians have always been quick to challenge local officialdom when open space in the public domain is threatened. But I didn't know that Sir Matthew Ballie Begbie, British Columbia's first chief justice, spoke out both firmly and eloquently for the preservation of Beacon Hill Park.

"It is interesting to note," Sherwin writes, "that roughly 100 years ago, Sir Matthew, with his typically clear and incisive mind, attempted to underline the great profit and utility from open-air recreation. In fact, you could say Sir Matthew was 'with it' at a time when the value of these things was not obvious to all, and certainly not to the city politicians of the day."

Judge Begbie's assessment made short work of an attempt to use space in Beacon Hill Park for a non-profit agricultural exhibition.

"All establishments addressing themselves to profit or utility," the chief justice pointed out in part, "are I think excluded by the terms of trust except the profit and utility (and it is great) from open air recreation such as may be carried out in a public park or pleasure garden."

And again, in summing up his findings:

"The park, alias the pleasure ground, is to be used for recreation and enjoyment and therefore I think no other manner, not for general purposes of profit or utility however great these may be."

Wise words from a famed British Columbian—and no less applicable now than when Sir Matthew delivered them.

LESSON FOR TODAY:

Save Everything, Including Early Gaucho

By JUDITH MARTIN

I am not going to shave my eyebrows this year, no matter what everybody else does. It took me years to learn to lift the left eyebrow without moving the right one, and I think it's one of my most effective looks.

Besides, I don't suppose Pablo of Elizabeth Arden has thought about how I inform my children in public that there is going to be trouble later if they don't stop whatever they're doing — but wiggling a bald forehead at them is not going to do it.

I am, however, willing to go along with everything else the fashion industry invents. I have dresses in all different lengths, and coats in all different lengths, and it's just too bad that it turned out that the dresses are all two inches longer than the coats I want to wear them with.

MIDSKIRT A PLOT

I refused to sign petitions against the midskirt last summer which, in my circles, was enough to brand me as an Erich Segal-loving warmonger. People of my political persuasion (property-owning Liberal) are supposed to believe that the midskirt is a plot by them (Yves St. Laurent, John Mitchell and that crowd) to crush freedom.

Actually, I like it. I feel good about being one of the few people who know that it is not pronounced "MIDDY," and I find that not having to spend all my time pulling my skirt to where it at least borders my legs give me two free hands which I can use to conduct symphony orchestras or find my handkerchief.

ROMPER FASHIONS

My complaint against fashion is not that it keeps thinking of new things so I have to throw the old ones away, but that its poverty of imagination has made it unsafe for me to throw anything away. If I had saved my rompers, I could be wearing them now as hot pants.

Old blue jeans were featured in a recent Vogue — and not just Jacques Tiffau's $230 dollar version, which would be all right, but the honest - to - God $7 variety, right there, taking up a full, glossy page. I hate to picture the readers who are snatching up their copies to find out how to put together a nonchalant look with jeans, an old shirt, espadrilles and uncombed hair.

A few years back, Harper's Bazaar had on its cover a lounging costume which consisted of an abbreviated shirt-waist dress with matching pants. I got out my college gym suit and was the first on my block with that look. I was also second, third and fourth, because I had to take gym for four years, for reasons I'd rather not discuss, and my friends all gave me their gym suits when they had completed the ordinarily required two years. I would like to have seen their faces when that issue of Harper's Bazaar arrived.

GAUCHO LOOKS SILLY

Even after that, it was a shock to see the latest thing for medium-old women — the ones who don't quite have the daring to have discovered blue jeans. It's called the Gaucho look, and damned if it isn't the silly outfit that Moises Sancha made me in 1964 for horseback riding.

You remember Don Moises, the Spanish sports tailor. He appeared briefly as himself in a movie called "moment of truth," and I hope you remember, because I assured him that it had made him quite a celebrity.

I sauntered into his place, one innocent vacation day in Madrid, slapped his stuffed horse on the backside and announced that I wanted a pair of jodhpurs. If I had just kept my mouth shut after that, he might even have made me a pair.

I was in a fanciful mood, however, and I suddenly told him to make them in black. Moises Sancha, who apparently thought I had said flowered chintz, closed his eyes and waggled a finger in my face, which is Spanish for "If you stop now, I won't turn you in, but don't try discussing this any further."

I did, of course. Like a fool, I pointed out that his shop was filled with huge bolts of black cloth. Those were for the Traje Corto, the Spanish riding clothes that always make the wearer look as if he is about to stomp his foot down arrogantly on top of your foot.

"All right," I said recklessly. "That's what I want." And that's what I got. Before that place was through with me, I had Spanish boots (natural leather, not black, which you can only have with jodhpurs), stiff frilled shirt (gold, not silver studs), Cordoba hat tied under the chin) and the distinct feeling that my pants were too tight. I tried to discuss the last item at my fitting but the tailor pinched a bit of strained cloth, and the last thing I heard him say before I fainted was, "It's too loose." We compromised by leaving it as it was, and I gave up Cognac and flan.

I also nearly gave up riding. By the time I got on the well-fitting suit and shirt, which is carved from some thin white wood, I don't need a horse, as my husband points out — he can just prop me up in the corner.

That agony was nothing to the first day I appeared in Rock Creek park determined to brazen it out. From all around, people gathered in the hope of seeing me fall off the horse.

The experience had curtailed my exercise somewhat, but now I know what to do about it. I'll get Pierre Cardin to make me some blue jeans, and I'll save Moises Sancha's handiwork for dinner parties.

(The Washington Post)

Dive, Dive, Dive was the order of the day for nurses Grace Wiwcharuck, centre, and Sheila Delaney when they joined the navy's recent diving course at Colwood. They're seen here with classmate Lieut. Jim McBurney preparing to make one of the 30 to 45-minute dives they made several times a day during the latter part of the course. (National Defence photo.)

Diver Training Helps Nurses Improve Their Bedside Manner

By PAT DUFOUR

The Canadian armed forces now have their first "mermaids" in the shape of two comely nurses, who are as adept at sawing a hunk of wire at the bottom of Esquimalt Harbor as they are at a hospital bedside.

Lieutenants (AW) Sheila Delaney and Grace Wiwcharuck made history this month when they became the first Canadian nurses to complete a diving course that qualified them as ship diving officers.

The three-week course they took at the navy's Colwood diving unit was Women's Lib at its best. Along with three other officers they went through routines that saw them practising searches on the harbor bed, sawing through angle wire, breaking links of chain and taking apart a "plumber's nightmare," all at depths of about 30 feet.

As eye-openers each morning they ran a couple of miles, pausing to indulge in a session of pushups midway.

By the time the course was over, the class had been whittled down to three, one man falling by the wayside with an infected ear condition, another suffering a bad ankle sprain during one of his dives.

Admitting that diving is a "field you don't get in general medicine," Grace says she and her friend "volunteered, sort of..." after the command surgeon, Surgeon-Capt. Derek Kidd, sent out a call for nurses willing to take the qualifying course.

Himself a diver, Kidd is an authority on underwater medicine and keen on building up expertise on his medical teams.

Grace explains: "They don't want to make divers of us particularly. But when we're called in on diving accidents we'll now know exactly what the diver is up against and how he feels when the shot-line is pulled up too quickly."

Sheila recalls their first experience with a shot-line.

"That was the first dive we made. Instead of flippers you wear heavy boots. A lifeline is tied around your waist and your buddy topsides handles the other end of the shot-line through a series of signals."

Both nurses are on staff at the hospital in CFB, Esquimalt, but both are hoping that they'll be called the next time the Rescue Co-ordination Centre receives a call from a diver in distress.

Things are quiet now but Sheila points out that the service answers many emergency calls from civilians, particularly in the summer months.

Grace may not have to wait so long. She's due to go to the Canadian base at Masset in early April, where a 10-bed hospital is being set up. "They tell me they get quite a few accidents in the Queen Charlottes."

The course is no one-shot deal for the two nurses. Like their male counterparts they must make at least one dive a month and take a refresher course every third year if they're to remain on the diving roster.

The prospect holds no qualms. "The first time you're down there you can't help wondering what you're doing, struggling with nuts and bolts at the bottom of the sea," says Grace.

That's changed. She's already trying to figure how to get back from Masset to get in her monthly dives.

Lydia's Cure for Womanhood More Fun Than a Caucus Race

Oh we sing of Lydia Pinkham And her love for the human race, She invented a Vegetable Compound And the label bears her face.

By ISRAEL SHEHKER

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — It was the face that launched a thousand nips.

Features composed, eternally 37, Lydia E. Pinkham peered thus from the label of her Vegetable Compound, promising women relief from the afflictions of their sex — and delivering just enough to win fame and fortune.

Those pioneer 19th and early 20th-century days of women's liberation now rest secure, for the papers of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company have been donated by a grandson, Daniel Pinkham, to the Schlesinger Library at Radcliffe College. They are now being catalogued and should be ready for outside scholars by year's end.

"The Harvard Business School was envious of us when we got all those records," said Mrs. W. Adolphus Cheek Jr., director of the library, savoring the wonders of 107 ledgers, the cash books, posters, pamphlets and files.

There is even what Barbara Haber, a Schlesinger librarian, called "a first-edition bottle." Its message was as plain as Lydia's face on the label:

"A sure cure for PRO-LAPSUS UTERI or falling of the Womb, and all FEMALE WEAKNESSES. Pleasant to the taste, efficacious and immediate... a great help in pregnancy..."

Lydia brewed the original edition in about 1850, in her kitchen in Lynn, Mass., following hints in The American Dispensatory — forerunner of the U.S. Pharmacopeia. She used unicorn root, liferoot, black cohosh, pleurisy root, fenugreek seed, water and alcohol.

"Obviously anything with enough alcohol would make anyone feel better," Mrs. Cheek said.

To save money, the Pinkhams eventually reduced the alcohol content from 22 per cent to 13.5 per cent, but even small doses were more than enough to ensure popularity during prohibition.

Daily newspapers round the country bloomed with mother's likeness and the most unlikely testimonials.

Boasting that it never paid for testimonials, the company offered $5,000 to anyone who could show that letters were not genuine or were published without permission. Genuine thousands claimed cures or wrote for advice.

In an age when sex and childbirth were more of a mystery and less of an option, Pinkham pamphlets were down to earth.

"Do you have the BLUES?" asked one. "Have you sounds in the ears like rolling carriages?" wondered a second. "Have you a feeling of fullness around the fundament?" demanded a third.

Lydia died in 1883, but her gross from compound and tablets went marching on to a $4 million annual total in 1925, with an advertising budget over $3 million. It cost so little to make the medicine that the profit before taxes was more than $700,000.

Each advance in medical knowledge and every retreat from the liberty — allowed medical prose meant stormy seas. Two years ago the family-owned Pinkham company sold out for almost $2.5 million to Cooper Laboratories Inc. of Mystic, Conn. Cooper says that sales of the compound and tablets are now about a million dollars a year, mainly in the Western Hemisphere.

Dear Lady, Shave Thy Brow

By NANCY L. ROSS

Consider the eyebrow. Originally it must have served a purpose.

But in the latter half of the 20th century — especially for the female of the species — those bits of fuzz above the eyes have long since become vestigial accoutrements.

Now eyebrow experts, who masquerade under names like Pablo of Elizabeth Arden's, counsel us to shave them off or blank them out with bleach and replace them with arched pencil lines or, worse, beige smudges.

The reason, of course, is that's the way people looked in 1930s movies, and the 1930s look is the way Paris wants people to dress.

Like Yves St. Laurent and Marc Bohan of Christian Dior and the rest of the silver screenstruck designers, they cite the sexy looks Marlene Dietrich and JEAN Harlow managed in the 1930s with the aid of curvilinear lines on their foreheads.

The truth is, now that fashion has become indistinguishable from the late, late show, from which brows were all but banished while the spotlight was put on luscious, juicy red lips, there is no longer any place for eyebrows.

On the contrary, the mouth, which went from full blown bee-stung glory in the '30s to near ignominious obscurity in the late 50s, has been making a slow comeback.

Remember the embalmed look — that eerie, frosted white lipstick and the thick black liner that lay on Elizabeth Taylor's eyes like pennies? Not too soon, however, pastel lipsticks brought a semblance of life back to the body while eye shadows fairly blossomed.

In recent years women everywhere have been wrestling with false eyelashes. The high fashion magazines then went on to more fun and games: geometric eyes, sequined eyes, polka-dotted eyes, red smudged eyes glistening with Vaseline, until at the end emancipated models like Penelope Tree threatened to topple over from top-heaviness.

With all the diplomacy of Detroit car stylists who can decree fins out or bumpers in, Paris beauticians have now decided to restyle the female face.

The 1971 model features glossy but not greasy bright or dark red lipstick and matching nail polish, nearly natural eyes and the no-brow look.

But will it sell? (The Washington Post)

THE BROWLESS LOOK... will it sell?

Women Propose Escape Clause For Marriages

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — How about making marriage a three-year contract, with an option to renew.

Just the thing for these times, says two women members of the Maryland state assembly — known as the House of Delegates. So they are proposing to legalize such pacts by state law.

Under a bill they have drafted jointly, the contracts would incorporate an agreement on alimony, property settlements and legal fees, in case either party should decide three years was plenty.

Authors of the bill are Lena L. Lee, a lawyer, and Hilda-gardeis Boswell, a divorcee and law student.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Avoid Trouble

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: What does a girl do when she realizes she married the wrong man? I knew right after I married Tom (not his real name) that I should have waited for Roger (not his real name either). Roger was in the service at the time.

Three years later I realize that I still love Roger. My husband is good to me and our two babies and I really have no complaints, but I feel so guilty not being able to return the love he gives me. My thoughts keep going back to Roger.

I hear that Roger is still single. Should I try to get in touch with him and see if he still feels the same way about me? Or do you think it's too late?—Wrong Choice.

DEAR WRONG: Don't try to get in touch with Roger. If he still feels the same way about you (or if you let him know how you feel), he might be encouraged to revive that love he once had for you, then what would you have? Possibly an affair outside your marriage. Or a broken marriage, which would be unfair to your husband and children. To seek happiness at the expense of another never works.

DEAR ABBY: I am 6 foot 4, weigh 240 pounds, am told I'm good looking and I play college football. They all call me "lady killer," but when I go out with a girl I'm the one who gets killed. Would you believe I don't know how to get anywhere with a girl? I get all the encouragement a guy in his right mind needs, but I don't do anything about it. When I get home I could kick myself. Am I normal or not?—Can't Score.

DEAR CAN'T: Every guy fumbles a little before he learns how to complete a pass. You need more experience. If 11 guys don't kill you, one girl won't.

DEAR ABBY: Would you please ask one of your medical experts what can be done about a face that has been badly scarred with acne. My scars are very bad and people just stare at me something awful. On top of that, my complexion is dark because I am part Indian and I have heard that if a dark-skinned person has plastic surgery, the scars can be worse than what you started with. Is this true?

I am 28 and female. I don't have much money, but if there is any hope for me I could save enough. Can you help me?—Ugly And Sad.

DEAR SAD: My medical experts agree that having a dark skin can complicate many cases of "sanding" (dermabrasion) and some plastic surgery, but it is by no means hopeless. You should be examined by either a plastic surgeon or a dermatologist to determine what can be done for you. You could be pleasantly surprised, so don't put it off. Good Luck.

CONFIDENTIAL TO FEELING BLUE: If you want to feel better, do something for someone today. Make a telephone call to some forgotten soul whom you remember. Write a letter (but be careful not to spread depressing news). Call on a shut-in. Just find someone who's worse off than you and cheer him up. You'll lose your blues. I guarantee it!

CRUMBED FISH AND PEARS . . . a nutritious combination

Fish Teamed With Fruit

During Lent, many people serve fish as a dietary substitute for meat.

Others, caught by inflation, are using low-cost fish more often all through the year to keep their budget under control.

In either case, the favorite family fish dish runs the risk of becoming as flat as yesterday's soufflé.

Below are some new recipes using fish.

The first is a delightful combination of two convenience foods — canned pears and frozen fillets. It is as nutritious as it is quick to prepare.

The second recipe explains poaching — or cooking fish in water. Fish cooked this way stays moist and can be used in many ways — as illustrated in the recipes that follow it.

CRUMBED FISH AND PEARS

1½ pounds fish fillets, fresh or frozen, thawed;
Seasoned flour;
1 large egg, beaten;
1 cup fine breadcrumbs or crushed cornflakes;
1 (28-ounce) can pear halves, drained;
Butter or cooking oil for frying.

Coat fish with seasoned flour, egg and breadcrumbs or cornflakes. Fry in hot butter or oil; set aside. Add the pears and cook 2-3 minutes on each side until lightly browned and heated through. Serve with potato chips and peas. Serves three to four.

POACH A POUND OF HALIBUT

1 pound halibut;
1 teaspoon salt;
½ medium onion, sliced;
1 tablespoon chopped celery with leaves.

Sprinkle halibut with salt. Place on sheet of dampened parchment or greased aluminum foil. Measure thickness of fish. Add onion and celery. Wrap tightly. Place package in rapidly boiling water and cover. When water returns to boil, time cooking period. Cook 10 minutes per inch thickness of fresh fish; or 20 minutes per inch thickness if fish is frozen. One pound halibut yields approximately two cups cooked fish. Use in salads, sandwiches, creamed or fish cakes.

CREAMY HALIBUT IN TOAST CUPS

Simply serve Creamy Halibut over toast — or, turn it into an occasion and serve in toast cups.

1 pound halibut, poached;
1 cup medium white sauce;
2 tablespoons catsup;
1½ tablespoons chopped pimiento;
½ cup cooked peas;
10 slices thin white bread;
Soft butter;
Chopped parsley.

Remove crusts from bread. Roll with rolling pin, if necessary to make thin. Spread on both sides with soft butter. Press into muffin cups. Toast at 300-degrees F. for 25-30 minutes, or until lightly brown and crisp.

Flake halibut and remove any bones. To hot white sauce, add catsup, pimiento, and peas. Heap toast cups with hot flaked fish. Pour sauce over. Garnish with chopped parsley. Makes filling for 10 toast cups.

FRIDAY NIGHT FISHCAKES

1 pound halibut, poached;
2 cups firm mashed potatoes;
½ cup flour;
1 egg, slightly beaten;
Salt and pepper to taste;
½ teaspoon thyme;
Butter or margarine;
Chopped parsley.

Flake halibut, removing any bones. Mix mashed potatoes, flour, egg, and seasonings. Add flaked halibut and mix well. Make into flat cakes. Melt butter or margarine in frying pan. Brown fish cakes on both sides in hot fat. Garnish with chopped parsley. Nice served with stewed tomatoes or creamed onions. Makes 10 cakes.

GIRL STUCK ON PINS

LONDON (UPI) — The British Medical Journal today reported the case of a 21-year-old girl who cannot stop swallowing safety pins.

It said after an X-ray revealed two open pins in her stomach, doctors at London Guy's Hospital found out she had twice been operated on at another hospital for the same thing.

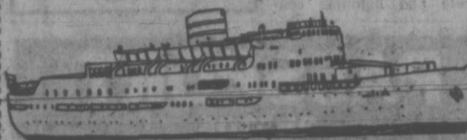

The Journal said she had twice discharged herself from other London hospitals with the latest pins inside her.

This Super-Arab State Looks Good on Paper

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The projected federation of Egypt, Libya and Sudan seems to have a lot going for it as a step toward a unified Arab.

Geographically, it is a vast, neat package on the map. It is a communion of interdependencies linking Mediterranean industrialism and oil riches with the pastoral spaciousness and crops of Sudan.

It has a common majority religion, Islam (except for the sometimes rebellious southern Nile regions, which are negro-pagan and Christian) and a common language, Arabic.

All three components are revolutionary regimes, with Egypt as senior partner for having thrown out King Farouk in July, 1952. Sudan emerged from British-Egyptian condominium rule in 1955-56 and since has ventured leftward by revolution. Libya, until recent years one of the poorest nations but now getting around $1 billion a year from oil, has been ruled by a leftist regime since King Idris I was overthrown Sept. 1, 1969.

CLASSIC PICTURE

In a cautious approach to federation, leaders of the projected new United Arab Republic have rosy prospects in their desert and verdant domain of about two million square miles and 50 million people.

Ideally, it forms a classic economic picture: Capital from exported oil of Libya, fibre and food of the less sophisticated and partly primitive Sudan, and professional knowhow and abundant labor of Egypt.

The after-Nasser regime in Egypt and the younger revolutions of Libya and Sudan seem determined not to repeat the errors of the Egypt-Syria-Yemen federation that broke up with Syria's angry withdrawal in 1961 after three years of uneasy, isolated partnership.

The three elements in the new setup are expected to retain sovereignty—as Syria did—and to remain flexible. Thus, for example, Egypt's debts to Moscow for building the Aswan High Dam and supplying advanced weaponry would not necessarily become liabilities of the two other partners.

GLORIES OF SALADIN

Significantly, the envisioned super Arab state is all African (whereas Syria and Yemen are Asian) and its elements are contiguous. Another asset for Egypt is that union with Sudan would mean fruition of the long campaign for "unity of the Nile Valley," and firmer control of the river waters without which Egypt could not live.

On paper, the whole scheme looks vastly more viable than the original UAR, more manageable than the sprawling political Arab League. And it would be eminently more practicable than the "Arab Nation" evoked by orators as a rhetorical device to summon up the glories of Saladin, worthy foe of the Crusaders, and lay claim to a dream empire of Arabic-speaking peoples from the Atlantic to the Persian Gulf and the Arabian Sea arm of the Indian Ocean.

Marijuana Is Harmful Contends Psychiatrist

MONTREAL (CP) — The effects of smoking marijuana are more serious psychologically than most people believe, a psychiatrist who has just completed a study of the subject said Wednesday.

Dr. Fred W. Lundell, who has closely studied 100 marijuana users over two years, believes that a relaxation of current drug laws is not justified.

In a 70-page report released Wednesday, Dr. Lundell said "legalization is the easy way out" of a situation plaguing lawmakers and youth alike.

Dr. Lundell, an assistant professor of psychiatry at McGill University here, completed the report late last year for the Prince Edward Island government. The report is largely a critique of the Le Dain commission's interim report on the non-medical use of drugs.

'CAVALIER ATTITUDE'

"The fact is, marijuana does produce serious adverse reactions, and to dismiss them by scientific or semantic labelling, or rationalize that these were psychiatric cases who would go psychotic anyway is a rather cavalier attitude," the report says.

The Le Dain report, released last May, recommended that control of marijuana be removed from the Narcotics Control Act and placed under the Food and Drug Act. This would make offences punishable by fines rather than by jail sentences.

Dr. Lundell said one key danger of the drug is that reactions are usually erratic, "not necessarily dose-related, easily controllable or predictable."

Dr. Lundell said some of the reactions he has witnessed included problems in perceptual and motor organization; inconsistency or a reversal of social values; disinterest in food or a preoccupation with food; lack of judgment and a fuzzy memory and a drop in motivation, lack of interest and emotional irritability.

Philae, submerged under the waters of the Aswan high dam, will be saved.

Its temples and shrines will be dismantled and rebuilt on the neighboring island of Agilka, which is to be landscaped to reproduce as nearly as possible the present exquisite little "oasis" in the forbidding landscape of Granite Hills.

Philae, the smallest of three islands on the southern side of the first Nile cataract at Aswan, was the first Nubian monument to suffer from man's tampering with the waters of the great river, and it is the last to be saved. Ever since the first Aswan dam was constructed in 1902, and later heightened in 1912 and 1934, the island, with its temples set in brilliant gardens and palm groves, has been submerged for nine months of the year.

Philae was included in the save the monuments of Nubia campaign launched in 1959, when it was realized that construction of the new high dam threatened one of the world's richest and most important cultural treasures.

Work on the delicate operation of saving Philae will begin shortly and last for nearly five years. It has been delayed several times, owing to lack of funds and other complications. It is imperative now that work be carried out immediately as the site is threatened not only with complete submergence, but also with destruction as a result of vibrations from the huge turbines of the Aswan dam-power station.

The go-ahead was given a few weeks ago at an international conference in Cairo at which plans for the salvage operation were discussed and subscriptions made to the UNESCO Philae fund.

UNESCO and the Egyptian government signed an agreement under which UNESCO undertakes to raise at least $5 million — nearly half the cost of the operation. The estimated price of saving the temples is $12.5 million.

Philae was considered the most beautiful archaeological site of the Nile Valley, with its complex of temples and shrines in a luxuriant garden.

For the archaeologists and historians, however, its importance lies not so much in its architectural and natural beauty as in the many inscriptions covering the walls of the buildings. These are for the most part religious texts, invaluable for the study of religious thought and the late form of the ancient Egyptian language.

Most of the monuments date from the Ptolemies and the Romans, between the second century B.C. and the second century A.D.

The earliest is a temple to the goddess Isis. It is the first religious building erected on the island by Nectanebo I, one of the last kings of Egypt.

Several of the island shrines were dedicated to Hathor, the goddess of distant places and guardian of the mountain of the dead, to mention only two of her many titles.

But the most important monument is the great temple dedicated to Isis, wife of Osiris, "King of the World," who was reputed to have brought civilization to mankind.

Osiris was venerated in Egypt for 2,000 years as the god of the earth and vegetation; the incarnation of Egypt, who "died" with the summer drought and was reborn with the yearly Nile flood.

The holiness of Philae was enhanced by the presence on the adjoining island of Biggeh of the tomb of Osiris and of a grotto from which the ancient Egyptians believed the waters of the Nile rose each year to perform the miracle of the rebirth of their god and of their land.

The temple of Isis on Philae stood as the last bastion of the ancient Egyptian religion long after the country had been converted to Christianity. The cult of Isis was celebrated there as late as 527 A.D., before it was abolished by the Byzantine emperor Justinian, who ordered the temple closed and its priests arrested.

Saving Philae involves dismantling, transferring, and rebuilding about 20,000 granite blocks and columns, most of which bear bas reliefs and engraved or painted inscriptions.

Though the island of Agilka has a considerably higher elevation than Philae, rising above the level of the artificial lake, its surface is not level and it is smaller in area. The extremely hard granite surface will be flattened and the island enlarged by building up the bed of the river with rock and sand.

Another complicated phase involves lowering the level of the lake around Philae to the height of the temple foundations while the buildings are dismantled. This can only be done by the complicated process of building a coffer-dam round the island.

The threat to this key monument in the history of human culture and religion is now greater than at any time in the 71 years of its twilight existence under the Nile waters. Any further delay might result in its permanent loss.

ST. PAUL'S
... falling apart.

Historic Cathedral May Go

By JUDY HILLMAN
The Manchester Guardian

LONDON — If Britain cannot find $6.8 million it could lose London's world famous St. Paul's Cathedral.

Old age, a leaking sewer, erosion by wind, rain, and insidious sulphur dioxide, and the vibration of heavy vehicles alongside have all taken their toll. While this monumental focus of Christian worship, patriotic pomp, and mass tourism is unlikely to collapse overnight, the need for major surgery with steel stitching, grouting, and stone transplants is real indeed.

Recently Sir Peter Studd, the Lord Mayor, launched an appeal for a building which already costs about $2 a minute to keep going.

CRUX OF MATTER

"People may say that this is a lot of money to spend in this way," he said. "In fact, it is roughly equivalent to the construction cost of a 350-bedroom hotel which does perhaps put it into proper proportion."

"If, however, St. Paul's was just a monument to a great age of architecture, even perhaps if it was just a vital attraction for our tremendously important tourist trade, I do not feel that I would be right to ask the nation to take part in this appeal. But in fact St. Paul's is far more than this. It is the survival and continuing work of a St. Paul's as a communications centre that is the crux of the matter."

The main problems concern the south side and the west entrance above the famous stepped approach where the twin towers are quite simply leaning away from one another.

INJECTION OF CONCRETE

The $2.4 million cure for both involves the injection of concrete to supplement the 6-foot thick limestone rubble filling that lies between the 9-inch stone walls. Then steel ties will be run across the western front to prevent further aching of the towers and an intricate network of lacing of steel inserted to hold it all together.

The building of the south wall and the slipping of the keystone are scarcely perceptible to the naked eye but other signs of the building's distress were pointed out by Bernard Feilden, an architect.

He is convinced that traffic bears much to the blame. "We can't prove that traffic vibration is causing this damage, and no engineer can prove that it isn't causing the damage. But I think you can give St. Paul's the benefit of the doubt."

The cracks in the dome are stable, but engineers still keep them under regular observation. Statues overlooking the street have lost all features, while their uncarved backs are pacted up with concrete and lightning conductors. High gutters carry a layer of fine grey dust.

"This is literally the face of St. Paul's washed away by erosion which comes from sulphur dioxide," Feilden said. "There is nothing we can do to stop it. The only thing we can do is stop it getting worse."

Disappointment Awaits Amateurs Who Plant Seed in March

By JACK BEASTALL

While March is far too early for sowing seed outdoors in the average open garden, it is not too early to talk about it and lay some plans.

Germination of any seed requires three things: air, warmth and moisture.

In the open garden there's plenty of air, but whether that air will reach the seed depends on the texture of the soil. A loose open texture is essential where seeds are to be sown.

The other two factors, warmth and moisture, are comparative terms. There are degrees of warmth and degrees of moisture. Warm to one gardener can be cool to another, while moist can range from slightly damp to decidedly wet.

Only experience, or guidance from an experienced gardener, can help the beginner avoid a lot of disappointment. And 50 years experience here on the coast proves the best results come from sowings made from the latter part of April into May.

Being resourceful by nature, the gardener has found means of correcting both these conditions. He resorts to that priceless material called compost when made of mixed plant wastes, or leafmould when made exclusively from leaves.

Compost has many attributes. Essentially it is a lumpy material, each lump acting like a tiny sponge incorporate quantities into a large area of soil. We apply the material to the seed drills.

My method, in a heavy clay soil, is to take out a seed drill about two inches deep and three inches wide. This is done with the corner of the hoe.

The drill is then filled with compost that has been pressed through a wire screen with a half-inch mesh. The seed is sown directly into the compost.

So far we have been

Tips For The Home Gardener

holding water in readiness for the needs of plants or seeds.

This lumpy or spongy texture also permits air to circulate more readily than it can through ordinary soil that lacks compost.

Thus we are able to create conditions approximating the requirements for good seed germination, and we have an ideal mixture for building good root systems on the seedlings.

Using compost for seed sowing we do not have to earlier. In fact, these soils dry out rapidly by late April and it is essential to have strong plants with extensive root systems by that time.

Only a knowledge of one's soil and micro-climate can be a reliable guide, but one thing to remember is that conditions for seed sowing improve with each week that passes in late winter and early spring, and it is better to hesitate for a week than to lose one's labor and seed.

Another variable with which the gardener has to contend is the seed itself. We can forget quality because all seed sold in Canada has to conform to quality standards, but we are still faced with a multitude of varieties, strains and selections.

The reason for so many is the variable conditions mentioned earlier; one will succeed where another fails. Therefore the next problem is to match the seed to soil and other prevailing conditions. To do this we have to experiment by sowing small rows of different varieties, strains, or selections, and discover which produces a crop that meets our requirements. In a matter of four to five years we shall find those best suited to our own garden.

WORK FOR WEEK

If you want to raise your own red salvia plants, sow the seed indoors this weekend. There are dwarf early varieties, and tall later. Sprinkle fine sand on surface of seedbox to avoid damping-off of the seedlings.

Look at tips of branches on Patroia for tassels of tiny crimson flowers. They are too often overlooked.

Plants of snowdrops and winter aconites can be moved now complete with soil without disturbing roots. Put into the ground at once, and they will continue growing.

When thinning fall sown onions, reverse the usual procedure by removing the largest. These are most likely to go to seed before making a bulb. Leave the smaller ones to grow undisturbed, using the larger as green onions now.

Start a few early potatoes to sprout and root.

When clearing the garden of unusable root vegetables, leave a dozen leeks. When flower stems appear, cut the stem at once. A cluster of small bulbs will result at the base to use as small onions.

Rabies Watch In B.C.

If the federal health service decides there is a hazard of rabies spreading from Alberta to British Columbia through hunting dogs, it will introduce measure to check and control the disease.

Dr. A. A. Larsen, provincial epidemiologist, said such a program would include the immunization of hunting dogs against the disease and shooting stray dogs.

He was referring to the chance of dogs owned by B.C. outdoorsmen contacting the disease when on hunting trips in Alberta where rabies is on the increase.

He explained that it might be four or five months before the dog manifests a rabies infection.

But Dr. Larsen said there is no need for concern yet.

The federal health department is watching the situation closely and is well equipped to deal with an outbreak.

He said spread of the disease is more likely to come from wild animals moving into B.C. through the mountain passes.

"The biggest danger of rabies spreading in B.C. is through bats," he said.

He said nobody should pick up or touch a bat found lying on the ground.

"The bat is probably sick and may be infected," he said.

He said pens who have come into contact with animal rabies are given vaccine — one shot a day for 14 days. A person who is badly bitten gets a 22-day course.

The treatment is painful for many people.

The Sacred Mushroom: Just Who Is Hallucinating?

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Last year, in a moment of wild extravagance, I paid $12.50 for a copy of the original, hardcover edition of John M. Allegro's book, The Sacred Mushroom and the Cross. Now that it is available in paperback for $1.50, my inherited Scottish sensitivities are twanging rather painfully.

You see, I wasn't able to read the book — not all of it anyway. I could read parts of it, including some of the pages in which Allegro presents his conclusions and speculative fancies — but most of the 349 pages of text are so laden with philological scholarship that only experts in ancient languages can read them with comprehension. The 144 additional pages of notes and references were also lost to me, although I could not help being deeply impressed by them.

Since its publication about a year ago this book has enjoyed much attention and some notoriety, although there has been among Allegro's fellow-scholars a conspicuous disinclination to take it all seriously. The main thesis of the book seems to be this: Ancient Judaism and Christianity were nothing but mystery and fertility cults, based on the eating of the penis-shaped, ecstasy-producing mushroom, amanita muscaria or fly-agaric.

Allegro apparently was raised in a rather rigid branch of English Non-conformity — and it has been suggested that he suffers a massive hangover from it.

I am not competent to criticize Allegro's scholarship as such, but I can unblushingly raise an eyebrow at some of the things he does with his scholarship. A Jewish scholar, Raphael Patai, said that Allegro brings to his study "a monomaniacal obsession that makes him invent and accept as facts the most farfetched, tenuous, and often impossible philological comparisons and derivations." That seems to reflect the scholarly consensus on the book.

Allegro suggests that Jesus never existed, but that he was an invention of the mushroom cult in AD 68. He dismisses the Christian Gospel as a mere literary device "to tell the story of a rabble, called Jesus, and invest him with the power and names of the magic drug." (Allegro's word-ideality method seems almost an exercise in scholarly punning, punning so extravagant that it could cause even Bennett Cerf to blush.)

Robert Graves, the English poet who has written imaginatively, and skeptically, about Christian origins, gave Allegro several sharp chops to the neck in an article on the book. Graves acknowledges — and he seems well-informed on the subject — that that wonderful mood-changing mushroom was indeed widely used in the ancient Middle East; but he points out that it was in limited supply and very costly, and he asks, "Where did the poor ascetic Christians get their mushroom supplies?" He suggests that, if Allegro had taken more seriously the simple botanical aspects of his speculations he would have avoided many serious errors of fact and interpretation.

One reviewer of The Sacred Mushroom and the Cross has said this: "As a put-down of the Christian faith, this should appeal only to the already unconverted." Exactly!

But, on the other hand, a book combining consciousness-expanding drugs, sex, and kinky religion, even though it is for the ordinary reader mostly unreadable, is bound to have some appeal today.

GOSPEL SINGERS Andrae Crouch and the Disciples will be belting it out here March 6 at 8 p.m. at Oak Bay Junior High. Recently nominated for a Grammy award in U.S. television, the Southern California group has put out two albums: Take the Message Everywhere and I've Got Confidence. The Shalom Singers of Victoria will play on the same bill.

Churches Using Wealth To Club Corporations

NEW YORK (AP)—American churches are using their economic clout to inject their principles into the ways of the business world.

"Social investment," the tactic is called.

Evidence of its spreading application showed up in several cases recently including:

—Leaders of six Protestant denominations joined forces to urge two metal corporations to postpone a projected copper mining venture in Puerto Rico, saying it would endanger the natural environment and human well-being.

—A United Presbyterian committee presented resolutions to the Gulf Oil Corp. for consideration at its annual stockholders meeting, asking it to alter policies in the Portuguese colonies of Angola and Mozambique.

—The Episcopal Anglican Church called on General Motors Corp. to cease manufacturing in South Africa, offering a resolution to that effect for a stockholders' meeting and saying South Africa's racial-separation policies would lead to turmoil and "destruction of foreign capital."

HOLD STOCKS

In each case, the denominations hold sizable blocs of stocks in the companies. "Investments are the church's secret weapon," says the social action council of the United Church of Christ.

"In one religious community after another the question has been asked whether these investments are furthering, or working at cross-purposes to, the objectives to which the church is directed by its mission."

Traditionally, church investments have been handled for one old-time purpose — to bring in the best return. But new criteria have entered the picture, as expressed in 1970-approved United Church guidelines.

"Social values and social justice ought to be given consideration together with security and yield in the investment of funds."

Altogether, churches in the United States are estimated to own real estate and securities worth up to $160,000 million, as much as half of it in commercial stocks.

United Church To Celebrate Prairie Night

Many visitors and former residents of the prairies are expected to attend Centennial United Church's annual Prairie Night Sunday at 7 p.m.

The program will have a centennial theme, with many of the women in old-time costumes and the men, frock coats.

Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson will read the scripture, Dr. Sam Parsons will give the prayer and Rev. John Travis will speak on "British Columbia: The Next 100 Years—Maybe."

The choir will sing a centennial anthem, written by Pam and Ian Westmacott. John Dunbar will sing and be master of ceremonies of a short social program.

HONOLULU, Hawaii (AP) — The fishermen and their wives cleaned and cooked the day's catch, and then let the grandparents eat first.

It was not a mark of deference for age; it was health insurance. Everyone wanted to see if the old people would become ill from poisonous fish.

For many decades, natives of the South Pacific, and in Caribbean waters too, have lived with the nervous knowledge that sometimes the fish they catch are mysteriously poisonous—not from mercury but from an unknown something else.

Perhaps a million people have been sickened by the poisonous fish, with an unknown number having died, says Dr. Martin D. Rayner, youthful red-bearded physiologist at the University of Hawaii, and one of the scientists whose research may at last be solving the mystery. A survey in 1966 in Tahiti showed 2,798 persons had suffered some degree of poisoning from 16 families of fish.

Among some Gilbert Island natives, the older folk were made fish-tasters for pragmatic reasons, says Dr. Albert H. Banner, a biologist-ecologist and prime investigator of the project, who has been looking into the puzzle for 25 years. Children might be more susceptible to the poison and might die. And young and middle-aged adults do the main community work, so they should be kept healthy.

Feasts have led to tragedy. Philippine workers in Sulu once caught a beautiful 20-foot eel, and had their picture taken at a party just before they consumed it. Fifty-seven men became poisoned, with 17 being taken to hospital, 11 of them unconscious. Two of them died.

FOUND IN LAGOONS

The poisonous fish are found in particular lagoons, or near certain reefs, especially in warm South Pacific waters. They seem to be always present in some lagoons, with the poison stronger than usual at times. Or poisonous fish may appear in some lagoon where they had never been before.

The fish poisoning often appears in lagoons or near reefs, where ships have been wrecked, or where piers have been built. This raises the suspicion, that the poison is generated from yeasts or other micro-organisms, such as might be found on the bottom of a ship, that can proliferate in warm waters.

The poison becomes concentrated in the food chain, Rayner says. It is stronger in carnivorous fish, which eat smaller fish, which have fed on plant life. Fatal human poisoning is usually associated with carnivorous fish—such as amberjacks, red snappers, groupers, and eel. Fish caught in some areas are not permitted to be sold commercially. In others, natives avoid eating fish until hunger for protein forces them to do so.

Then they may eat a small amount of cooked fish, and if they notice a numbness of the mouth, they induce vomiting. The toxin or poison can affect the central nervous system, and peripheral nerves. Symptoms may include diarrhea, vomiting, breathing distress, intense itching of hands and feet, paralysis of the legs, and suffocation.

COMPLETE EVALUATION of all the city's firefighting equipment is being conducted by Vancouver engineer Bert Piper for the Canadian Underwriters' Association. City firemen are testing equipment at the federal department of transport's dock in the Inner Harbor with the former CNR car ferry Canora as a backdrop. When the two-week evaluation is completed the city's fire insurance rates will be adjusted according to their findings. The last time Victoria's defence system was evaluated by the CWA was 10 years ago. (Irving Strickland photo.)

Canada Plans to Plug Into 'Eye in the Sky'

By JEFF CARRUTHERS
(Special to the Times)

OTTAWA — The federal government has given provisional approval to Canadian participation in the U.S. ERTS "eye in the sky" program. ERTS stands for Earth Resources Technology Satellite. And the ERTS program involves two remote sensing satellites to be launched by NASA in 1972 and 1973.

Instead of building a Canadian experimental resources satellite, the federal government plans to "plug in" to the NASA ERTS program, receive satellite pictures (taken with three color and infra-red camera-like scanner instruments) of all Canada, and determine whether satellite "remote sensing" is useful in detecting and mapping such things as air and water pollutants, crop diseases, types of soils and crops, and geology.

According to federal spending estimates tabled recently in the Commons, some $6 million is to be spent on Canada's resource satellite program in the federal department of energy, mines and resources during 1971-72.

About $600,000 was spent this year. It is understood the majority of this spending, about $4.5 million, will be devoted to getting ready for ERTS participation.

The estimates indicate that $1.1 million will be spent to convert a moth-balled radar station at Prince Albert, Sask.

to allow the facility to track and receive electronic signals from the two ERTS satellites as they pass over Canada.

Another $3 million will be spent on a data processing centre in Ottawa, to turn the electronic signals into useful color photographs. Both facilities must be completed by December, according to a federal official, in order to be tested and in proper working condition by the time of the launch of ERTS-A in March, 1972. ERTS-B is scheduled to be launched a year later.

Diseased Trees, Likely Ore Sites On 'Big Picture'

Planned but not yet approved is a photo interpretation facility, to be added to the Ottawa data handling facility. There is the more distant hope that Canada may decide, on the basis of the ERTS experience, to put her own resource satellite in orbit.

A Canadian remote sensing satellite, its very nature, could also supply the country with information about the activities in other countries. An example being considered by agricultural experts is determining the success of the wheat crop in major competitor countries or in major potential buyers.

Under the agreement with NASA for ERTS participation, Canada must make available internationally all of its satellite photographs received from ERTS.

Corrected photographs will be made available to government departments and agencies, industry, universities and interested parties outside Canada through a to-be-formed agency comparable to the National Air Photo Library, but handling only photographs produced by the specialized satellite and high altitude aircraft sensor technology.

But when it comes to non-Canadian satellite data from ERTS, Canada will have to wait in line along with other nations to get photographs from NASA.

As it turns out, by using Prince Albert for receiving instead of building a new ground terminal at Churchill, Man., Canada will have to make special arrangements with NASA to record data of the East coast not available to Prince Albert.

The government has rejected a proposal to build the new station at Churchill for the ERTS participation because different radio frequencies will be used for satellites after ERTS.

The federal government also intends to spend about $500,000 of the 1971-72 program money for developing and testing new remote sensors for high-altitude aircraft.

High-altitude aircraft will produce much smaller coverage than the 100 by 100 mile satellite photos, thus allowing more detail. More important, high-altitude aircraft will permit the use of radically new sensing devices, such as microwave equipment for measuring moisture in the air and laser instruments for detecting oil spills and mineral deposits.

The ERTS satellites will contain multi-spectral (three color) scanner cameras and heat-sensitive infra-red scanner cameras.

Many potential users of satellite remote sensing data are skeptical because they think the photographs will cover too large an area to be able to provide enough detail for recognizing useful information on the ground.

But the federal experts stress that color rather than detail will provide the majority of useful information from high-altitude sensors. Diseased trees and agricultural crops, for example, can be made to stand out in different colors from normal plants using the heat-sensitive infra-red scanners.

Also, the remote sensors will provide "the big picture." For example, geologic structures seen over a large area can give mineral-seekers valuable clues to where valuable deposits of oil and ores might be found that local photos or even composites cannot.

A final decision to participate in ERTS must be given to NASA by mid-April.

Noisy Smoothness In a Home of 19

By MARY TRUEMAN
Windsor Star

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — On any given night at a house on Cross Street, you are likely to find euchre and pinochle games in progress, an organ, guitar and fiddle combo warming up, and a record player and two TV sets in full operation.

It's not a neighborhood recreation centre, but the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bastien, whose marriage in November, 1969, combined two families for a grand total of 17 children, now aged four to 21.

Mrs. Bastien, the former Mrs. Ena Zalisko, was a widow with six children when she gained 11 additions from widower Ed Bastien's previous marriage.

After maintaining harmonious, if noisy, household in their five-bedroom home for 18 months, the couple feel they can laugh at friends who thought the union would be unworkable.

One of their peace-keeping secrets is that the rule of law prevails.

"We got the kids together before we were married and told them what the laws would be," said Mr. Bastien.

"They haven't given us any trouble."

The law says all the children must be in bed by 11 p.m. on week nights—even the oldest, who is 21 and working.

The TV goes off at 11 p.m., unless a show is just finishing, but it must be off by 11:15 under any circumstances.

All phone calls are limited to 10 minutes. The family's seven girls do all the dishes and the older boys do all the ironing. Mr. Bastien insists that "not one of them is lazy."

In fact, all the children do more work now than before the families were combined and often surprise their parents by doing more than is asked of them.

Mrs. Bastien is kept busy with just the cooking and the washing. Her two washing machines run all morning every morning, processing eight or nine loads a day.

12 LOAVES DAILY

She boils an eight-quart pot of potatoes every day and makes dozens of sandwiches. The family's bread consumption is 12 loaves a day.

"One of our 16-year-olds eats a whole loaf after supper every night."

The bakery calls the Bastien home when its day-old bread stock is ready to be picked up. The grocery list is further swelled by 48 quarts of powdered milk a week plus a three-quart jug of whole milk a day. And 12 quarts of pop must be bought each week.

The family's transportation is a custom Ford mini bus, with seating capacity for 12 adults. It took Mr. and Mrs. Bastien and 13 of the children to Nova Scotia for a camping trip last summer.

The Bastien's chief complaint about Windsor is that there are not enough places where a family can go together.

"In the old days there were dance halls where parents could take their kids," says Mr. Bastien. "But now if the kids are under 21 about the only place they can go is a school dance."

Engagements and Weddings

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Brotherston, 1577 McRae Avenue, wish to announce the engagement of their only daughter, Patricia Gains, to Mr. Stephen Harold Gains, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Gains, 4118 Cedar Hill Road.

The wedding will take place Saturday, March 27, 1971, at 8:00 p.m. at St. Alban's United Church.

Weddings

Gentry — Soutar

A double-ring candlelight ceremony was solemnized on February 13, 1971, at 7:30 p.m. in Knox Metropolitan United Church, Regina, Saskatchewan, when Susan Edna Gentry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Gentry, Regina, exchanged vows with Mr. Robert John Soutar, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Soutar, Victoria, B.C. Reverend C. L. Harbour officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a beautiful Dresden style gown of nylon tulle over tulle, with train trimmed with lace. Her three-quarter-length veil was edged with seed pearls and held in place with an orange blossom headpiece. She wore a gold cameo brooch, given in her by the groom's mother, who wore a gold wedding day. The bride carried a semi-cascade bouquet centred with a lilac orchid, surrounded with pink feathered carnations, roses and stephanotis.

Maid of honor — Miss Linda Stroh and bridesmaids were Misses Carol Jones and Lorie Knudsen. They were dressed alike in floor-length gowns of pink chiffon and white lace, and carried bouquets of roses and baby mums with purple streamers. They wore pink flowers in their hair. The groom was attended by Mr. Nelson Gietz, best man, and Messrs. Bruce Karlton, Jerry Pirman and Scott Soutar acted as ushers.

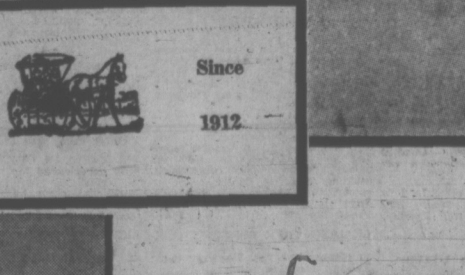

The reception was held at the Vagabond Motor Inn. The bride and groom will reside in Winnipeg.

Younger — Foster

The Reverend Canon Bolton officiated at a quiet ceremony at St. Mathias Church on Saturday, February 20th, 1971, when Saks Foster, of this city, became the bride of L. Col. Lewis Younger, of Edmonton, Alberta. Col. and Mrs. Younger will reside at 605 Cedar Hill Road, Victoria.

Rates for publication of Wedding or Engagement notices, with or without pictures, available on request from the Advertising Department. (Special forms to assist you in writing copy also available.) Copy for weekend editions should be in the Victoria Press office no later than 5 p.m. the Wednesday prior to publication date.

TERMS OF PUBLICATION

The Victoria Press Ltd. shall not be liable for non-insertion of any advertisement beyond the amount paid for such advertisement. In the event of an error occurring in the publication of an advertisement, the publisher shall not be liable for the space actually occupied by the item.

All claims on error in publication shall be made within 12 hours thereafter and if not made shall not be considered. No claim will be considered for more than one error. The publisher shall not be liable for errors not affecting the value of the advertisement.

All estimates of cost are approximate. Advertisers will be charged 10¢ per space actually used. All advertising copy will be held in the office of the Victoria Press Ltd., who reserve the right in its sole discretion to edit, alter, or omit any advertisement.

Advertisements must comply with the British Columbia Human Rights Act which prohibits any advertising that discriminates on the basis of race, sex, colour, religion, ancestry, or place of origin. Advertisements between 4 and 65 years unless the condition is justified by a bona fide requirement for the work involved.

While every endeavor will be made to forward replies to box numbers to the advertiser as soon as possible, no responsibility is assumed in respect of loss or damage alleged to arise through either failure or delay in forwarding such replies, however caused, whether by negligence or otherwise.

Investors Seek To Recover Cashcard Loss

By STEPHEN BROWN

Fifteen Vancouver people have launched a suit against Savex Cashcard Ltd., a company also operating here which offers investors large profits from selling "Cashcard" discount shopping cards.

The joint suit, initiated Nov. 3 by people who invested money in the firm and are suing for what they lost, is now at the examination for discovery stage, Vancouver Better Business Bureau manager Vince Forbes told the Times. It is reported to be for about $19,000.

The Cashcard operation in Vancouver, until recently its Canadian headquarters, is "dead now, as far as the pyramid (selling structure) goes," Forbes said.

"They have one girl in their office, that's it. And we know of course that they have no computer."

PAID $12

Cashcard advertises a "computer buying service" which is supposed to come up with information on where an item can be bought at the lowest price. This service is for people who have paid $12 a year for a Cashcard card, which also entitles them to a 10 per cent discount on some purchases at member stores. About 123 Victoria shops now offer discounts to any customer who has a Cashcard card, according to Cashcard's new Island franchise-holder, former real estate salesman Ross Corby.

Forbes said Cashcard has closed its large Vancouver office "because they ran out of people in the pyramid — there was nobody left to sell to."

Adverse publicity generated by his BBB office was also a factor, Forbes said. Cashcard has moved its headquarters to Toronto. It still has a fair-sized office at 660 Fort in Victoria.

SUIT FILED

Forbes said Cashcard filed a slander suit against him and the BBB Dec. 24, "but nothing has been heard from them since. It's completely stalled."

In Victoria, a suit has been launched against Dave Betts, former franchise-holder for Cashcard on Vancouver Island, and two more are being contemplated, says Corby.

He said the three suits would total about $2,700 and involve alleged unpaid bills Betts left behind for Cashcard's office furniture and some advertising.

After Corby bought the franchise on Jan. 1, Betts left and is now heading for England, where he plans to set up another Cashcard scheme.

Victoria BBB manager Bill Tindall said the people at the top make the big money in a pyramid-type selling scheme.

But after a while the market for potential investors and card-holders in an area is sucked dry.

This is what Forbes said apparently already happened in Vancouver.

Tindall has provided Victoria police with a copy of the statement of claim against Cashcard by the Vancouver investors.

RECORDS SEIZED

Tindall said the RCMP and city police in Vancouver recently seized the records of Kosco Cosmetics Ltd., a company that was using a pyramid promotion much like that of Savex Cashcard.

A pyramid promotion structure operates much like a chain letter, with investors being offered financial incentives to bring more investors into the scheme. Basically the more money an investor puts into the scheme the more he can make... or lose. Investors in Cashcard get blocks of Cashcard cards for their money, which they can resell to others at a profit, in blocks or individually.

Tindall said police in Vancouver are preparing criminal charges against Kosco, under the B.C. Securities Act. This would be a first.

JOINT PROBE

Last month, the RCMP commercial fraud section announced it was conducting a joint investigation with the B.C. Securities Commission into Kosco's promotion scheme.

"If they prove their pyramid selling program to be contrary to the Securities Act or to the lottery section of the Criminal Code it would eliminate this kind of operation in B.C., including Cashcard," Tindall said.

City Council's Group A finance committee granted Savex Cashcard a licence to operate here Oct. 29. Earlier, Dave Betts, made an application to city hall but this was turned down by officials before it reached finance committee.

APPROVED SALE

A second application was then made by Robert Edwards and Garth Lawrence, then of Vancouver, president and treasurer of Savex. They have since left Vancouver for Toronto.

The second application did reach finance committee and was approved, in spite of a police report which, in the words of city comptroller Jim Bramley, "was not too keen about Cashcard."

Bramley said Betts was not representing the Cashcard company at the time of the first application, but was representing himself, as an agent.

But after the licence was granted, Betts was running things in the Victoria office and held the Cashcard franchise for the Island, according to Paul Sheske, one of Cashcard's many director-investors.

Ald. Percy Frampton, chairman of the finance committee, said he doubts that the suits against Cashcard would move city council to revoke their licence.

"I'm sorry for these individual investors (who are suing)," he said, "but the licence doesn't concern investors. We were concerned with the consumer. The investor is an agent in my mind. Frampton said council would not be involved "unless a consumer who paid his two bucks (the discount card costs $1 a month) came in to us and said 'Look, I went to this store and they wouldn't give me the 10 per cent discount.'"

GAVE INFORMATION

Detective Tom Smith of the city police told the Times he presented information regarding suits already started against Cashcard elsewhere at which a licence for the company was subsequently approved.

He said he does not know "if we even got a copy" of the second application for a licence.

"We (the police) didn't recommend a licence," he said, "but anyone who applies has the right to go before council, and council saw fit to grant them (Cashcard) a licence."

Corby said the BBB is against Cashcard because the BBB's main financial backers are the department stores, "and they don't like us — we're drawing trade away from them to the smaller stores."

Alberta Outlines Off-Track Plans

EDMONTON (CP) — Off-track betting will be in operation this summer in Calgary and Edmonton, Al Anderson, general manager of the Edmonton Exhibition Association, said here.

He said discussions have taken place between his organization and the Calgary Exhibition Association on how to operate the system.

Initially, it appeared direct telephone and teletype lines between the two cities would be used. Later more sophisticated equipment would be installed.

Anderson said that plans are tentative, but downtown offices would be opened in both cities for taking bets. Only the office in the city in which a race meeting was being held would be open. Betting in the other city would be done at the track.

Food and drink would probably be served to bettors the track at which races were not being held.

He said that the Lethbridge Exhibition Association may later be included in the betting.

In the legislature Wednesday, attorney-general Edgar Gerhart said off-track betting would be allowed if it was controlled by the two associations.

***

Replying to N. S. Roper (SC—Ponoka), Gerhart said "It will be under way this summer if the two associations can get the mechanics worked out."

It would have to be carried out by the associations "to head off having to go into the full field of criminal law enforcement in... off-tracking betting."

Anderson said that plans are tentative, but downtown

Students Clean Up Oil Blobs

More than 200 people, mostly secondary school pupils, Friday cleaned up the worst of a one-mile oil slick which contaminated Chesterman's Beach just north of Long Beach national park on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

"They did an excellent job," said Ernie Bach, a member of the Tofino Chamber of Commerce. "They came with shovels and rakes and loaded the large oil globules onto three trucks."

Some oil patches were a foot in diameter, he said. The oil which fouled the beach and drifted in Clayoquot Sound is believed to be crude oil flushed from a ship's tanks.

The slick missed Long Beach, though small traces of oil were spotted here and there.

William Silta, president of the Chamber of Commerce, said the oil was hurting marine life.

Its effect on razor clams, for which the district is well-known, would be damaging, he said.

Federal transport officials said they were unable to find the source of the oil.

Customs Seize 2,000 Pounds Of Marijuana

LONDON (AP) — Customs men seized a ton of marijuana in Britain's biggest drug haul. They said it was smuggled in by plane from Uganda and estimated its value on the black market at least $1 million ($2.5 million).

The marijuana was found in a house in the north London suburb of Willesden. Police said they had charged two Tanzanian students with its possession.

Customs officials said investigations began several days ago when a plane from Uganda arrived with 1,220 cans of a substance called papain. Each can weighed 22 pounds and was marked "meat tenderizer."

Motels Having Good Winter

A motel survey by Pat Frumento, president of Victoria Visitors Bureau, discloses one of the best winter seasons in years, Chamber of Commerce directors were told Friday.

The motel industry had complained last summer of slower business, blaming a lax economy and reduced tourist spending. Frumento said operators claim a "tremendous number of people from the prairies" and "far more from Ontario than ever before."

Peninsula Plans $525,000 Rink On DoT Land

Plans to build a $525,000 curling and skating rink on three acres of leased department of transport land were announced this week by the Saanich Peninsula Agricultural and Recreational Association.

Mike Nun of Sidney says the money will be raised for the project by public sales of debentures in $50, $100 and $500 denominations.

The municipalities of the Saanich Peninsula have not as yet shown any interest in the project.

Sidney Rotary club has started the fund rolling with a pledge of $10,000 and the Sidney Kinamen have presented a check for $2,380.

On Tuesday Spars Building committee chairman Len Bland will make final the rink design and construction plans.

The rink will measure 85 by 200 feet with seating capacity for 1,000 people and provisions for an additional 600.

Four sheets of curling ice and provisions for an additional four.

Although only three acres of land near Victoria International Airport are leased effective March 15, an additional five acres will be available for future plans that include a covered swimming pool.

Pool Rates To Be Higher

When Victoria's new swimming pool in Central Park opens next fall, charges will be "slightly higher" than the current fees at the Crystal Garden.

But there will be reductions for children who can't afford the new price.

"We're looking into that right now," Ald. Percy Frampton said Friday. "Let's face it, for some families on welfare it will be pretty difficult, if not impossible, to pay the full price of admission for their kids."

The schedule for the new pool hasn't been settled other than it will be "slightly higher" than the 25 cents for children and 50 cents for adults at the Crystal.

On the reduced rates, Frampton said a way will have to be found to handle them without embarrassment to the youngsters getting them.

CAPITAL SCENE

Sales and Marketing Executives of Victoria will meet at Executive House, 777 Douglas, 5:30 p.m. on Monday, March 8.

Ron Cadaby, information officer for the federal environment department, will speak on "Royal Tour '71" at next Tuesday's meeting of the Kiwanis club — 12:10 at the Empress Hotel.

Museum Friends Elect Officers

Friends of the Provincial Museum have elected new officers.

They are Douglas Turnbull, president; Joan Ruskowski, vice-president; Miss Winifred Speechley, secretary, and Mrs. Pamela Lewis, treasurer.

The group's main project is financing the restoration of the original school-house of St. Ann's Academy, once it has been moved to a site next to the Provincial Museum.

By DR. FRANK MILLER

In treating your pet for external parasites, you should first know what type of pest you are trying to eliminate whether it be fleas, ticks, or more rarely, mites. Secondly, the product you use should be made specifically for that kind of pest and specifically for use on the species of pet you are going to treat. Many, possibly most, dog flea products are potentially dangerous for cats. Products intended for tick control are even more likely to be toxic. Besides fitting the product to the pet and the pest, be sure to follow directions carefully as to how to apply and how often. Spray products (powders to a lesser degree) should not be used around the pet's food and water dishes nor should they be used in a room housing other pets who are by nature cold-blooded. Fish, for example, are extremely susceptible to poisoning from sprays. Remember when using these products on cats that the feline is frequently a fanatic on cleanliness and almost immediately starts to lick himself clean of the products applied. Consequently, cats require extra care when you apply any pesticide.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My wife has fallen in love with a Persian kitten. Unfortunately, it is owned by a breeder who claims it is show stock of excellent breeding and she wants $250 for it. I think I am being "had" if I pay that for it. Right?—L.S.

DEAR L.S.: Not necessarily. Top quality show Persians may sell for even double that figure.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Jiffy, our dog, has been getting a lot of egg yolks lately because my husband is on a low cholesterol diet and he can only have the whites. We have suddenly noticed that Jiffy is putting on a bit of weight herself and we are afraid now she may have a cholesterol problem. Do we have anything to worry about if we quickly put her on my husband's low cholesterol diet and keep her on it?—A.G.

DEAR A.G.: Best bet's to put Jiffy on a good canine diet and simply reduce total caloric intake until she does lose weight. A low cholesterol diet (at least in humans) does not, necessarily, reduce blood vessel cholesterol. In many cases cholesterol count is influenced by nutritional factors other than fatty acids. In a great many cases it is strongly influenced by stress.

In the Police Court

A 22-year-old man who committed the most "flagitious" and vicious attack on a 19-year-old girl when he pushed a beer glass in her face was sentenced to four years in prison by Judge William Ostler Friday for causing bodily harm with intent to wound.

Ostler directed his remarks to Leonard C. Morris after finding the man guilty.

Ostler said he was "appalled" at the apparent calm the accused displayed during Friday's trial. The girl suffered about 100 stitches to her face and chin in the assault last Nov. 28.

Jean Harris testified she was sitting in a beer parlor with her mother and stepfather.

Morris came over to the table at one point and told Miss Harris she "had better live it up now... you are not going to live to Christmas."

The accused returned to his table and the girl's stepfather went over to talk to him.

Morris, court was told, later returned to talk to Miss Harris and she felt he was in a much friendlier mood at the time.

The young woman said she used to go out with Morris about two years before the incident.

Dr. David Baird, a plastic surgeon, said he operated on Miss Harris and that he removed two pieces of glass from the wounds.

Baird said they are permanent scars to the victim's upper lip and chin.

The girl's mother testified that the accused "reached over the table" and shoved the glass in the girl's face when he attacked her daughter.

Prosecutor John Macintyre read Morris' criminal record which included convictions for possession of stolen property, false pretences and theft over $50. The record dated back to 1965.

Macintyre said Morris still had three months to serve for an unlawfully-at-large conviction.

"I don't remember that night. I don't know anything about it," Morris told Ostler before sentence.

Earl J. Lamson, 28, address unknown, was sentenced to one day in jail and fined a total of $150 when he pleaded guilty of false pretences over $50 and false pretences under $50.

Court was told that the accused wrote a worthless cheque for $41 to obtain auto parts from a company at 675 Burnside East last Nov. 4.

He wrote another worthless cheque for $153 to buy skin-diving equipment from a store at 832 Flagard Dec. 16, court was told.

Ostler fined the man $75 on each offence with the one-day sentence for the over $50 charge.

Chamber Eyes Park Protection

A recommendation to back Beacon Hill Park Protective Committee was referred Friday from directors to executive officers of Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

Bob Ellis, of the chamber's environment committee, praised the "responsible approach" of the citizen committee opposing expansion of streets in the park and called for endorsement by directors.

He accepted the suggestion that the city hall proposal and efforts of the committee be discussed by chamber officers first.

Ellis also referred to the proposed inclusion of Nisnat Triangle in the West Coast Park, a wilderness area.

He said he did not have sufficient information to make a recommendation, but noted that he did not agree with the view of some who "want to make the whole province into a park."

EXISTING PARK

"Preserving an existing park is one thing," he said. With other areas "you've got to draw the line somewhere. You've got to think of the economy, too."

Ellis drew attention to the two highway entrances to the city, "both of which contribute more than their share of junkyards and body shops."

In a report from Esquimalt Chamber of Commerce, president Dr. John Rogers said the municipal council had responded favorably to urgings that Esquimalt portals be spruced up, especially from Victoria West.

Cocaine Seized

ROME (Reuters) — Police seized 18 pounds of cocaine valued at $792,000 on the black market in a raid Friday in a cottage on the outskirts of Rome. Police said it was the biggest cocaine haul in Europe in 15 years.

John A. Fraser, 19, of 1093 Foul Bay, and Peter C. D. Coste, 18, of 1931 Sandover Crescent, were each fined $75 for possession of stolen property over the value of $50.

The two pleaded guilty to having an upholstered bench in their possession Jan. 30. The bench, worth $250, was the property of the University of Victoria and was reported missing from the Student Union Building.

A police officer testified that Fraser told investigating officers they had found the bench on a boulevard on the way home from the university.

Sheena Camozzi, 18, of 3972 Oakwood, and Frances E. Lambert, 18, of 1678 Alderwood, were each fined $250 for separate shoplifting offences.

Miss Camozzi pleaded guilty earlier to taking a necklace, valued at $3, from Eaton's Feb. 6.

Miss Lambert pleaded guilty to taking a similar item, worth $2 from The Bay Feb. 6.

Ostler said the pre-sentence reports of the defendants were very similar and each had had every material advantage provided them.

Vernon S. Perera, 27, of 2529 Cook, was fined $250 for shoplifting.

He was observed lifting a chess set from The Bay Feb. 13 about 6 p.m.

More Class Relevance Needed

Teachers must rid themselves of "militique" to make education more relevant to the community, Dr. Charles Gregory told the Saanich Teachers Association conference Friday.

Gregory, a Victoria child psychiatrist, said one of the conditions of existence is the ability to pick up feedback from the environment.

But the institutional role played by the school and the attitude of some teachers are cutting off communication with the community at large.

"Sometimes the preservation of a structure takes precedence over the reason for running it," observed Gregory.

The same lack of feedback is found in various levels of government and can lead to disintegration of social order as evidenced in daily news events.

INVOLVEMENT

One of the ways to improve communication between school and the community is to involve non-teaching professional people in the program, continued Gregory. He suggested participation of a psychiatrist and some parents in an experimental Grade 1 class "might provide us with some of the answers that are desperately needed."

Charles Barber of Cool-Aid led the topic School-Why Are Children Turned Off? Education today is relevant to school boards, taxpayers and the B.C. Teachers' Federation but not to kids, said Barber.

Too often facts are presented in a dry, unconnected fashion.

"There is no sense of rhythm," he said. Suggesting history books which stop at 1960 "cripple interest."

Music, sex, pollution, dope and war in Vietnam are all highly relevant to today's youth.

these with sympathy and credibility get through to the kids," Barber said.

Teachers must also communicate with parents who "sometimes have the right to be afraid about things thrown at their child."

Train Crash Fatal

SHEERNESS, England (AP) — A commuter train crashed through the buffers and tore through the station of this Kent coast town Friday night, killing a woman who was buying a ticket. At least 10 other persons were injured. The front of the train wound up in a taxicab stand.

ONE MILLION KNIT PICKERS CAN'T BE WRONG

KNITS

Pick your knits then pick your patterns from Eaton's great selection of summer fabrics. Knits are the number one choice for millions of women using their clever fingers to add curve, cling, drape and flattery to their sewing objectives. And Eaton's has a range from crochet to jersey. That's what we really call knit picking. Here are just a few:

The Big Dope Pusher Is Nixon, Says China

By NORMAN WEBSTER

PEKING — The "monopoly capitalist class" in the United States, led by President Richard Nixon, is deliberately encouraging drug-taking to corrode and poison the minds of the U.S. people, a New China News Agency article has charged.

The motive, it said, is to weaken the people's fighting will and thus maintain the criminal rule of these capitalists.

The accusation came in an otherwise reasonably factual account of what the NCNA, citing U.S. sources, called an epidemic of drug-taking in the United States. Trafficking extended even into primary schools, it said.

'BIG BUSINESS'

Then the flat charge: "The fundamental cause of the inundation of various drugs in the United States is deeply rooted in the monopoly system while the arch criminals are a handful of monopoly capitalists represented by Nixon. Drug traffic has become a 'big business' in the United States."

"While stepping up its fascist suppression of the people, the U.S. monopoly capitalist class has tried deliberately to entice the people to divorce themselves from the reality of class struggle."

"In order to corrode and poison the minds of the people, it has set in motion its propaganda machine to advocate drug using and even openly advertise the theory that drug using is harmless. This is a vain attempt to weaken the people's fighting will so as to maintain the criminal rule of the monopoly capitalist class."

Although attacks on U.S. social conditions are nothing new here, the article was especially sharp. But then, the Chinese have had memories of the drug trade.

In the 19th century China was corroded by opium as foreign traders reaped fabulous profits. Britain even fought one of history's more discreditable wars — the Opium War of 1839 to 1842 — to force on China the continued dubious benefits of the trade.

China today has no drug problem.

B.C. May Ban Drink, Smoke Advertising

By PETER McNELLY

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark warned Friday the provincial government is studying in "deadly earnest" the question of eliminating alcohol and tobacco advertising.

"If you spend money on rehabilitation... it doesn't make sense to subsidize death through income tax deductions," Loffmark said, describing advertising of liquor and cigarettes as a form of "pushing" which should be condemned.

Loffmark was speaking during debate on a bill to establish a $25 million drug, alcohol and cigarette education and rehabilitation fund. The bill also provides $20 million for the home acquisition fund and $5 million for crop insurance.

Members from both the New Democratic Party and the government side indicated much of the annual interest from the $25 million fund should be used to stress education against drug, alcohol and cigarette abuse.

The minister said the pushing of heroin and other dangerous drugs has been deservedly condemned, but added that cigarette and alcohol pushing must be condemned on the same principle.

"The time has come for the governments to examine very closely the laws relating to advertising of alcohol and tobacco," said Loffmark.

Bob Strachan (NDP—Cowichan Malahat) called for a ban on such advertising and warned the MLAs that young people using drugs find it hard to take warnings from adults too seriously because of "addiction to cigarettes, alcohol, tranquilizers and pep-pills" by adults.

He urged Premier Bennett to seek a total ban on tobacco and alcohol advertising at the next federal-provincial conference.

The B.C. Narcotics Addiction Foundation came in for some criticism, particularly from Dr. Scott Wallace (SC—Oak Bay) who said it is "stupid to pour extra money into the foundation's work which has failed to produce satisfactory results."

He said the foundation has a "punitive aspect to its work which involves the making of names of addicts available to police, with the withdrawal of methadone treatment as a means of forcing agreement from patients."

The drug rehabilitation project of Mrs. Olivia Batley of North Vancouver was praised by Socreds, including Loffmark, and by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett. Mrs. Batley uses the "Pavlovian" method rather than traditional Freudian psychology in her method.

Loffmark said the experimental project run by the psychiatric social worker has produced 30 or 40 apparent successful rehabilitations at modest cost in contrast with the federal Matsqui institution which has been a "multi-million" waste of money.

He said the federal government last year turned down the B.C. approved request for a grant for Mrs. Batley. This year, said Loffmark, the B.C. government has told Ottawa it will withdraw all other such approvals and give precedence to the request unless Ottawa provides money for the project.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said his party will not support the bill.

He said there is enough in this bill — $50 million — to pay off B.C.'s hospital debt. This money, McGeer said, should be given to hospitals instead of being lent back to the taxpayers at interest.

Because the money from special funds like these comes from revenue surpluses, it belongs to the taxpayers in the first place, he said.

HIJACK SUSPECT FIGHTS DEPORTATION EFFORTS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 19-year-old California youth won a reprieve Friday night against deportation to face air piracy charges in Seattle after a Western Airlines jet was hijacked to Canada.

Lawyer Tom Berger was granted a writ of habeas corpus by Mr. Justice J. G. Ruffin in British Columbia Supreme Court which requires immigration authorities to produce Chappin Scott Paterson.

Paterson in court Monday to show cause why he should not be released from their custody.

Paterson, a first-year college student when he was drafted into the U.S. Army, pulled off Canada's first international hijacking Thursday night when he diverted the Boeing 737 to Vancouver from its scheduled destination in Seattle.

There were 66 other inductees on the plane. All were on their way to Fort Lewis, Wash., for six weeks of basic training.

The writ was obtained while a special immigration hearing was being held on Paterson's application for landed immigrant status.

Geologists Call Valdez Risky Site for Pipeline

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Two consulting geologists say the potential for earthquakes makes Valdez a poor risk to be the southern terminal of the proposed trans-Alaska pipeline and recommend a route through Canada for North Slope oil.

Previous Canadian route proposals received little support during a United States Interior department hearing on the pipeline, which extended into its fourth day today.

The hearing is on the department's 225-page environmental impact statement on the 800-mile pipeline from Prudhoe Bay on the Arctic coast to the warm-water port of Valdez. The route is proposed by the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.

C. I. Hawley and Gary Player, Anchorage consulting geologists, said Friday the planned oil terminal at Valdez would be in "a zone of structural weakness."

During the last 70 years the area has averaged an earthquake a year measuring at least five on the open-ended Richter scale, they said.

AVOIDS TANKERS — The two also said a Canadian route would avoid tanker shipment of the oil.

Hawley and Player said the turn easterly along the flank pipeline would go from Prudhoe Bay to Edmonton. The proposal would follow the current proposed route from Prudhoe Bay to Big Delta, turn easterly along the flank of the Yukon-Tanana upland, enter Canada at the Ladue River and cross the Yukon River to follow the Pelly River upstream.

From the Pelly headwaters it would follow the Laird River downstream, enter the Great Plains near Fort Nelson, B.C., and then to Edmonton.

The interior department statement said a Canadian route through the Mackenzie Valley would require an additional two to four years of study.

The two geologists said their proposal has a cost and time advantage.

"It would use most of the Alyeska engineering data and preserve the investment in construction camps north of the Yukon River," Hawley said.

DELAY REDUCED

He said the delay forecast by the interior department would be reduced because of existing highway and railway access to the southern portion of the route and the present engineering studies completed north of Big Delta, Alaska.

Hawley said it also would avoid two major seismic faults crossed by the Alyeska route.

"If national security is really involved, wouldn't you rather have Alaskan oil moving through a pipeline 100 miles from the coast than in tankers vulnerable to submarine and air attack?" Hawley asked.

Some members of the Canadian Parliament and the British Columbia legislature have recently voiced concern about possible oil spills from supertankers off the British Columbia coast while en route to West Coast refineries.

Colombian Riots Kill 8

CALL (AP) — President Misael Pastrana Borrero declared a state of siege in Colombia Friday night and sent troops to the country's campuses after eight persons were killed and 47 wounded in rioting at the University of del Valle.

IRA Snipers Fight Army

Policemen Killed, Wounded

BELFAST (AP) — Two policemen were killed early today as gun battles raged in the firelit streets of this Northern Ireland capital between government forces and snipers of the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

Two snipers also were believed dead, and four policemen were wounded. The wounds of one were so serious he was administered last rites.

There had been two weeks of uneasy peace in Belfast before violence erupted Friday night, caused by the explosions of several gelignite bombs and fires in the city.

A hail of bullets from automatic weapons cut down three armed policemen standing with arms linked between jeering Protestant and Roman Catholic crowds in the Ardoyne district of the city. Two constables who ran to their aid also were hit.

Troops of Britain's Royal Highland Fusiliers returned the fire and reported shooting two civilians, one carrying an automatic weapon.

MAY HAVE GOT THEM

"It is possible that one or both of the gunmen were killed," said Brig. Frank Kilson, the British commander. "We saw the men fall to the ground and then be carried away by their comrades."

In the same area, a Catholic stronghold, a police vehicle was ambushed and its driver shot in the leg. One British soldier was shot in the knee and five others were wounded by bomb fragments.

The latest violence was regarded by authorities as an IRA reprisal for the arrest of 28 Catholic women for demonstrating and fighting with police Friday outside a court. Inside four men were being tried on charges of breaching the peace during a recent IRA funeral.

Advice Sought

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Tom Campbell said Friday he wants to meet Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier in Ottawa for a first-hand briefing on federal government plans to handle transient youth this summer.

"That's a highly speculative question," he said. "I

Crownex Seeking To Dump Tailings

By AB KENT

Plans to resume copper mining at the Jordan River property of Crownex River property of Crownex International Ltd. include a pollution control application to empty up to one million gallons of or tailings a day into Juan de Fuca Strait.

Until a permit is issued enabling the mine to start commercial production by November, pre-production development will allow, down from a value of $60,000 to be spent next month to an average $25,000 a month, Crownex president Sidney B. Fowlds said Friday.

He pointed out that while Sunco was operating the mine — it shut down more than two years ago — tailings were pumped through a pipeline to tidewater off the mouth of the Jordan River. Pollution control legislation became effective after that.

Crownex is the successor to previous companies which leased and operated the claims owned by Cominco Ltd.

In its application to the B.C. pollution control board, Crownex Development Ltd. wholly owned by Crownex, seeks the use of a 4,000-foot tailings pipeline to carry waste from the copper mill to be carried on underground at the mine's short distance off the West Coast Road.

Fowlds said granting of a permit hinges partly on a declaration from the regional district engineer that the dumping doesn't conflict with local bylaws. Engineer Bill Gerry said he has been asked to look into the matter, including seeking advice from other technical people such as fisheries officers.

The application for a permit has not yet been advertised in

Truckers Angry, Vote Set Sunday

Teamsters Union leader Senator Ed Lawson refused to speculate today on the outcome of a vote Sunday by more than 3,000 striking truckers on whether to obey a back-to-work order issued Friday by the cabinet.

Vancouver members will hold their meeting in the Queen Elizabeth Theatre, starting at 2 p.m.

Victoria members, numbering about 80, will meet at the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra.

Lawson was asked what kind of position he would be in if the membership decided to stay on strike.

"That's a highly speculative question," he said. "I wouldn't care to comment on that."

But he said the Teamsters mood was not one of acceptance of government actions.

"VERY ANGRY" — "They're very angry. It's clearly stripping them of their right to collective bargaining. The companies have the full weight of the government on their side."

If the Teamsters opt to continue their strike, it would be the second time in less than a year that unions have defied Bill 33.

Construction trade unions refused to go back to work after the cabinet invoked Bill 33 July 18. Labor Minister Leslie Peterson later intervened in the deadlock to bring labor and management leaders together to arrange

The company has re-organized subject to approval regulatory authorities — changed its name to Can-Basic Industries Ltd. and is proceeding with plans to make certain acquisitions in the entertainment industry, including Herschorn Productions Ltd., financing in the amount of $107,500.

These funds will allow Herschorn to purchase premises in Vancouver, which contain a recording studio, and also purchase a 16-track recorder.

Pacific Western

Pacific Western Airlines reports a net loss of $232,000 on earnings of $43.5 million for the year ended Dec. 31, 1970.

This compared with a net profit of $584,000 on earnings of $33.9 million in 1969. Labor unrest, a sluggish economy, delay in integrating B.C. Airlines into PWA's schedules and a downturn in northern oil exploration contributed to the loss, the report said.

During the year, PWA acquired Evers Transport Ltd. and bought B.C. Airlines for $1.1 million. An injunction granted employees of B.C. Airlines held up for three months its integration with PWA.

Cunard

The Cunard Steamship Co. has declared a loss of $4.74 million in its preliminary report for 1970.

Part of the reason for the 1970 loss, compared with the previous year's profit of $7.25 million, is a new accounting method which takes in proportional losses of consortium activities such as container ships which Cunard has a minority interest.

Passenger traffic, most of it originating in North America, now accounts for less than one-third of Cunard's gross revenue, and in 1970 lost $1.25 million vs. a 1969 profit of $2 million.

Tax Tips

Tax Tips, a daily feature in the Times, is prepared by the Victoria District Office, National Revenue, Taxation. For additional information on preparation of your income tax return, write to the Victoria office of National Revenue, Taxation.

Q. I purchased bonds in my son's name. For tax purposes is the interest on the bonds his income? Or is it my income and if so must I report it on my return?

A. Any interest income from the bonds should be reported as your income as long as your son is under 19 years of age.

Q. My wife took a part-time job last year for the first time since our marriage. She earned $3,000. Do I have to include her income with mine or does she have to file a separate return for her income?

A. Since your wife will have a taxable income she must file a separate return. Because her income was more than $1,250 you will not be able to claim married exemption on your return.

Q. My wife and I have a joint bank account. The payments into the bank account are made by me as my wife has no private income of her own. The T5 slips are made out in our joint names. Should I still report the interest income on my tax return, including it with my income?

A. All of the bank interest must be reported as your income since your wife's share of the money on deposit came from you.

Q. My husband has a farm tractor that he uses, not to earn his living, but to do farming and a little logging and collecting of firewood. Can he claim any depreciation on this farm tractor?

A. If your husband is a farmer and is reporting his income from farming or logging he would be able to claim depreciation on the tractor. However, if he has no income from farming or logging, and the tractor is not being used for the purpose of producing income, he would be unable to claim any depreciation.

Usual Cries of Anguish From Public

During the next few weeks, as Canadians perform the annual ritual of filling out their income tax forms, there will be more than the usual cries of anguish. For some, taxes will go up (Manitoba increased both its corporate and individual tax rates this year) and for all, there's the special 3 per cent surtax, which will continue throughout this year.

On top, individual real income will be down for many, because of unemployment in the latter half of the year, and because everything costs more due to inflation in the earlier part of the year.

There's little relief in sight, particularly when one analyzes the report on the National Finances published this time each year by the Canadian Tax Foundation. With the federal government's estimates for 1971 spending starting to come in, and as each of the 10 provinces presents its budget in the next two months, a rather gloomy tax future seems certain.

The real question being asked with growing frequency by taxpayers at all levels is: when is enough enough. The more sophisticated are beginning to wonder aloud as to where we are going, and why. Whether it is this year, next year or five years from now, a moment of truth is coming, a time when the public may well demand a major change in the role it will permit and expect the government to play in the lives of its citizens.

DEMAND BY PUBLIC

The growth of all government spending, particularly at the provincial and municipal levels, presumably in response to the public's demand for public services, indicates that unless the trend is reversed, or at least arrested, there will eventually come a day when government may very well totally control and manage the nation's economy. Put another way, freedom of individual economic movement and choice might disappear.

Consider the indicators. This year all governments will take about $30 billion in revenues, up considerably from the $11 billion they took only a decade ago. Government spending is growing at a much faster rate than the economy. In 1960, governments took about 27 per cent of the gross national product — this year the take may be around 38 per cent.

If one puts all the data into a computer to establish the trend, George Orwell's prediction that 1984 will be the year, seems alarmingly appropriate.

The trend to a government-run economy appears more sharply in the number of government employees. In 1960 the federal government had about 150,000 employees on its payroll, but by 1970 this had climbed by 100,000 to 250,000. The provincial governments have another 350,000 on staff. In the provinces, the number of government employees varies considerably from province to province.

DISTURBING QUESTION

For instance in Ontario, 15 out of every 1000 population work for the provincial government, while in Manitoba government employees (not taking into account the 500 estimated to be hired if the government's state-owned auto insurance plan goes into effect) are now 23 government workers for every 1000 of population.

Smile Show Faces Collapse After Denied Home Theatre

By CHERYL BORRIS

It's curtains for Jerry Gosley's Smile Show after 18 consecutive years if a theatre is not found before the end of March.

The Victoria Theatre Guild has denied Gosley permission to use Langham Court Theatre — the Smile Show's traditional home — most of this summer.

In an interview Friday, Gosley talked about his predicament. "Every year I write for permission to use Langham Court Theatre for the summer months. This year I received a letter from the theatre guild explaining that the theatre would only be available for the month of July."

Gosley said that although he has used Langham Court Theatre off and on for 18 years he has never taken his tenancy for granted.

"On the other hand," he said, "I've had no reason to think that I'd be denied use of the theatre."

The letter stated that the guild will make certain repairs and renovations during June and that the theatre is required for rehearsals in August.

Theatre Guild president Mary Jane Scott commented: "We have had two extremely successful seasons in the past two years, and as the present season ends in May we must make necessary renovations during June. We have also decided on an early start in September with a production from the University of Victoria's Players Club. These students must rehearse during August."

She said, "The theatre has not been refused as such, it's just that we have had to reduce the time the theatre is available. We are very sorry this has had to happen."

Mrs. Scott said that the guild has in other years rehearsed in places other than the Langham Court Theatre but this year was unable to find alternative space.

The Smile Show, which started 30 years ago and has been playing for 18 consecutive years to Victoria audiences, has already begun this summer's program. The cast has been lined up, centennial skits have been prepared, and "hundreds of dollars" of advertising has been sold.

Gosley has been planning to release a recording in conjunction with the summer '71 production, which, he says, will not be released if the show folds.

The Smile Show, which played to over 10,000 people in Victoria last year, has performed for audiences and conventions year round in Victoria, Vancouver, Harrison Hot Springs, Ottawa, Edmonton, and Salem, Oregon.

Hundreds of regular visitors from the United States see the Smile Show, every year and send letters and cards of appreciation.

The revue is a sort of London music hall production, loaded with skits, songs, dancing, comedy and nostalgia.

Sam Lane, executive member of the Greater Victoria Tourist Bureau, said Friday, "Gosley has done a magnificent job keeping a form of entertainment alive that is exclusive of anywhere else on the North American continent. This would be a sad blow to our expression of Victoriana. This is something we shouldn't lose."

ONE MINOR INJURY resulted from this fence-wrecking collision at Whiteside and Raymond Friday afternoon. Judith Stewart, 26, driver of the van, suffered an eyebrow cut that required two stitches. Driver of the other vehicle, Mark H. Colegrave, of 560 Mountfield Street, was not injured. Damage to the vehicles totalled $1,000. Damage to the fence was $100.

VANCOUVER BURIED AGAIN

Snow Everywhere But Here

Logging operations in the higher reaches of the Sooke Hills have been further stalled by snow which fell Friday in most parts of Vancouver Island.

Since December snow conditions in the hills have slowed down logging considerably, and the latest fall, varying between four and six inches, will delay resumption of operations, a logging contractor said.

The weather office said seven inches of snow fell in the Nanaimo region early this morning, but no snowflurries are expected for southern Vancouver Island.

Friday at rush hour a squall of wet snow hit Victoria, but it subsided as quickly as it came 30 minutes later.

The temperature Sunday will rise to 40 and the day will be sunny.

RCMP said the road conditions on the Malahat was good, but motorists should be cautious of ice patches, especially after sundown.

In Vancouver, police advised motorists to spend the weekend at home as snowflurries continued over the lower mainland today.

Three inches of snow fell in Vancouver this morning, raising the snowfall since Friday to seven inches.

More than 66 inches of snow has fallen on Vancouver so far this winter compared with the previous record fall of 55.2 inches recorded during the winter of 1964-65.

Friday's snowstorm caught

Vancouver motorists unprepared for another winter onslaught. Some who had optimistically replaced winter tires at the beginning of the month abandoned their vehicles on slippery hills or left them in downtown parking lots.

Buses were running about one hour behind schedule and a B.C. Hydro spokesman said relief drivers had to be driven along the bus routes to find their vehicles.

The college's head, Jack Matthews, 42, now headmaster of Lakeside College, a boys' boarding school near Peterborough, Ont., is also expected on the west coast at that time.

The Canadian committee has taken options on possible sites in the Vancouver Island area but Butler declined to say where they were.

He did not rule out the possibility that the college might be established on one of the Gulf Islands.

Asked about rumors that Vancouver Island might lose the college in favor of a site near Vancouver, Butler replied: "No sites have been looked at on the mainland."

In an interview, Matthews said that the college committee has options on land 30 miles north of Victoria, and is also investigating properties on the west coast, south of Long Beach.

The first UCV college, established in 1962, is located in the 14th century castle of St. Donat's in South Wales. Matthews' 18-year-old son, Angus, is head of the sea rescue service at St. Donat's.

On the same pattern as St. Donat's, Matthews says the Pacific college will have a curriculum that, apart from academic subjects, will provide challenge through such ventures as a ski patrol, sea

Canadian-United States effort and 75 per cent of its initial cost of $8 million will be provided by the American college committee.

Matthews says the college will be aiming at an enrolment of 300, of which 200 will be boys in the 16-to-18-year age bracket.

He explains: "We want to take students who are in their last two years of secondary school. We have partly chosen that age group so that the nationalistic tendencies of their parents will not be so ingrained."

Of the 300 students, about 100 will come from North America, most of the remainder from Pacific Rim countries, and some from Europe.

Barry Tackaberry, secretary of the Canadian committee, says that the $8 million "is just the beginning. Eventually it is hoped that all the students will be attending under scholarships."

Scholarships at St. Donat's, where 40 Canadian students make up the largest contingent, are valued at about $2,500 a year. Two scholarships have been provided by the New Brunswick government, and one each by British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario and the Canadian Labor Congress.

Matthews says the students will progress toward an international baccalaureate, recognized international standard for admission into the world's major universities.

Instruction will be given in English, by Canadian and American teachers.

Matthews explains: "The international baccalaureate is courses in all traditional subjects with which Canadians are familiar but, in addition, most languages of the world, economics, philosophy, anthropology and oceanography."

He speculates on what may be achieved through the association of boys from various countries and backgrounds at the college:

"You almost dream of when there will be a world misunderstanding and the two people who are in the top position to do something about it are old school buddies."

Drowning Victim Identified

Police have identified the victim of a drowning accident on East Sooke Lake Thursday as Robert Joseph Jackson, 21, a recent arrival in the area from Burwash Landing in the Yukon.

Sooke RCMP said Johnson, who had been living with his wife's family at 4894 Tavanis, had gone canoeing on the lake and was last seen alive about noon. His overturned craft was found near shore at 2 p.m., and Johnson's body was recovered by Armed Forces divers at the bottom of the lake at 6 p.m.

An inquest will be held next week.

High-Speed Downtown Chase Leads to Raft of Charges

A teen-aged driver faced a barrage of charges in provincial court today after he ran a roadblock and led police cruisers on a high-speed chase through downtown streets early this morning.

William Samuel Joseph, 19, of 409 Ker Ave., pleaded guilty to criminal negligence, failing to remain at the scene of an accident, driving without insurance and driving without a licence.

He was remanded to March

1 for sentence by Judge William Ostler.

Evidence showed Joseph was stopped by police on Belleville at 4:40 a.m., fled from that cruiser and slipped past another police car trying to set up a roadblock. Police said he ran half a dozen red lights and as many stop signs before knocking over a garbage can, sideswiping a parked auto and running into a building on Douglas near Yates.

At one point he was traveling the wrong way on Yates Street near Douglas at high speed. Police said he had a blood-alcohol reading of .23. Ostler said that with Joseph driving, a car became a "dangerous machine."

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please give me the name and address of the business in town that recycles newspapers?—J.K.C.

A. There is no local business which recycles newspapers although the Salvation Army will accept bundled newspapers if they are brought to its depot at 831 Johnson. A glut of waste newspaper and certain pollution problems in recycling them makes it uneconomical at the present time.

OUR NEW VICTORIA PRESS building is still little more than a hole in the ground. But, an interesting one, and as a confirmed sidewalk super-intendent, I spend rather too much time watching while the construction industry's oversized Dinky toys get on with the job.

The scene at the moment, as viewed from our newsroom windows, is more or less humdrum. A diesel cat is loading earth into a truck, a giraffe-necked mobile crane rears alongside a stack of pipe-sections, and a construction man in white hard hat is pounding stakes.

I hope this means that the queen of the show, a sophisticated hole-digger of impressive heft, is going to return for another engagement.

This truck-mounted behemoth appeared on location a few mornings ago, with its steel tower or derrick lowered neatly along its back. Guided by hand-signals from below, the operator jockeyed his rig into position. Up rose the tower, hydraulically from horizontal to vertical by hoisting arms on either side.

More signalling and jockeying. Then, with a touch so dainty that it would scarce crack an egg, the maestro at the controls lowered the biggest auger I ever saw in my life. It came to rest precisely on the peg that marked where the first hole was to be delved.

A couple of hands with spades loosened the peg. The auger twirled briefly, then emerged with a few hundred pounds of earth and clay packed in a neat cylinder around its bit.

At that point, my phone summoned me away. By the time I was able to rejoin the gallery, the machine had chomped out a hole that a country well-digger with hand tools couldn't match in a week.

Wonderful to watch... but time-stealing if you've business elsewhere!

Charles White, who thought up and developed the Undersea Gardens, is free to admit that he has been a compulsive fisherman since he was old enough to crank a reel. A while ago, he decided to share the savvy acquired through his years as biologist, guide, and highline sport fisherman.

The result is a soft-cover book of 39 pages—one of Saltire Publishing Company's useful "How to Catch" series—that deserves a place in every salmon-chaser's bookshelf. Or, better still, in his tackle kit, where it can be consulted when strikes are few.

Profusely and entertainingly illustrated by Nelson Dewey, Charles White's "How to Catch Salmon" deals in detail with gear and methods, fish-finding, time-and-tide influence, and even how to clean the catch.

Along with a wealth of sound advice, Charlie offers a truth of which we're all too frequently reminded.

"Salmon are the most ornery creatures on the face of the earth," he writes, "and cannot be depended upon to do any particular thing at any particular time..."

As I. M. Sherwin of 2810 Sea View Road points out, Victorians have always been quick to challenge local officialdom when open space in the public domain is threatened. But I didn't know that Sir Matthew Baillie Begbie, British Columbia's first chief justice, spoke out both firmly and eloquently for the preservation of Beacon Hill Park.

"It is interesting to note," Sherwin writes, "that roughly 100 years ago, Sir Matthew, with his typically clear and incisive mind, attempted to underline the great profit and utility from open-air recreation. In fact, you could say Sir Matthew was 'with it' at a time when the value of these things was not obvious to all, and certainly not to the city politicians of the day."

Judge Begbie's assessment made short work of an attempt to use space in Beacon Hill Park for a non-profit agricultural exhibition.

"All establishments addressing themselves to profit or utility," the chief justice pointed out in part, "are I think excluded by the terms of trust except the profit and utility (and it is great) from open air recreation such as may be carried out in a public park or pleasure garden."

And again, in summing up his findings:

"The park, alias the pleasure ground, is to be used for recreation and enjoyment and therefore I think no other purpose of profit or utility however great these may be."

Wise words from a famed British Columbian—and no less applicable now than when Sir Matthew delivered them.

Big Decisions Pending On United World College

By PAT DUFOUR

Speculations on where a Pacific Rim college will be built may be ended March 25 when a top official of the United World Colleges and the man who becomes headmaster of the Canadian college in June meet in Victoria.

Chairman of the college site committee, Bertram Butler, 513 Transit, said this week that Rear-Admiral Desmond Hoare, UWC provost in Britain, is expected here March 25. He is currently in Singapore where another international college is due to be established soon.

The college's head, Jack Matthews, 42, now headmaster of Lakeland College, a boys' boarding school near Peterborough, Ont., is also expected on the west coast at that time.
